"Aleen, no one in the wide world save you"—

The time for words had passed, and it was fortunate that there was something besides words crowding in to take their place. I put my arm about her waist, drew her toward me and kissed her.

A burst of merry laughter from behind, a child's arms about my neck, a rosy mouth against my cheek!

"Aleen," I said, "this is the "thing," the 'redheaded girl with a chalky complexion,' the 'sinner,' who kissed me. She has offended again."

Aleen rose and without a word walked away and crossed the board walk, and in a few minutes her retreating figure was lost within the portals of the hotel.

"Is she mad?" asked my little friend, "Mad doesn't express it. Can't you find a word in your child's vocabulary that will better describe her condition?"

IN A CONVENIENT VEHICLE The Reason He Sometimes Comes Three Times to the Surface.

[Copyright, 1962, by the S. S. McClure Company.]

The young doctor took the sick man's temperature, scanned his tongue, felt is pulse and lifted the eyelids to scrutinize the optics. After a few secondit of profound meditation—or was it hesitation?—he prescribed for his patient in blindly scrawled Latin, adding in English the direction, "To be taken twice a day in any convenient vehicle."

"Be there any show fer me to git well, doctor?" quavered the sick man. "Sure there is, Mr. Simmons. You'll be all right now in no time. These pills will set you up at once."

Then the sapient young disciple of Escalapius drew on his gloves and gave a reassuring grasp to Ben Simmons' outstretched hand. With an encouraging smile all round upon the staring little Simmonses and the pallid wife, over whose face a gleam of hope seemed to flicker, he departed, tearing down the road at a breakneck speed, as if bound for a dying patient.

"Hanged if I know what alls the old chap," he mused as he galloped along. "How is a doctor going to prescribe for an idiot who can't give a clearer account of his feelings than 'a dull, heavy misery in his bones?"

But Ben Simmons mended from the bour that Dr. Bledsoe took charge of the surface again. Each time he sinks, however, the supplied at lime he sinks, however, the supplied at lime he sinks, however, the supply of air in his lungs grows less until unditimately there is no longer sufficient to the surface again. GULF STREAM MARKS.

The Course of the Flow Through the Ocean Plainty Indicated.

The color of the stream is perceptibly deeper blue than that of the neighboring sea, this blueness forming one of the standard references of the nautical novelists. The depth of color is due to the high percentage of sait contained as compared with the cold green water of higher latitudes, observation having shown that the more salt held in solution by sea water the more intensely blue is its color. Thus even in extratropical latitudes we sometimes observe water of a beautiful blue color, as for instance, in the Mediterranean and in other nearly landlecked by evaporation above the average, says the National Geographic Magazine.

Another important fact in connection with the stream is its almost tropical temperature, due to the fact that its high velocity enalties it to reach the middle latitudes with very little loss of heat. Upon entering its limits the temperature of the sea water frequently shows a rise of the dighteenth century and the earlier years of the inheteenth an importance in the minds of navigators that it no longer possesses. In those days the chronometer, invented by Harrison in 1765, was still an experiment. Instruments were crude and nauticatables often at fault.

The result was that the determination of the longitude was largely a matter of guesswork, a vessel after a voyage from the channel to America often being out of her reckoning by degrees instead of by minutes. The idea often being out of her reckoning by degrees instead of by minutes. The idea often being out of her reckoning by degrees instead of by minutes. The Motion Prevalled.

An old town official of the city of Macon, Ga., says in Short Stories that during the night of the earthquake disturbances of 1886 the city council was in session.

Tou can hardly imagine a boy saying: "I am going to be a second class man. I don't want to be first class and get the good jobs, the high pay. Second class jobs are good enough for me." strong point against President Brady at the Council meeting last Monday evening when he pointedly put the question, why, if the President knew that certain members had been bribed by Cummings & Co., he had not done his duty and taken legal action against them. The Alderman put the President in a hole—rather. Goaded on by the accused Aldermen, we understand that Brady has laid their cases before the County Attorney for investigation. The proceedings of that meeting were more disgraceful, if possible, than those of any former one. Fertile Cuba.

In Cuba cabbages frequently weigh as much as twenty pounds. All vegentables do well. Radishes may be eaten from fourteen to eighteen days after sowing, lettuce in five weeks after sowing, while corn produces three crops per year. Sweet potatocs are perpetual. The natives dig up the tubers, cut them off and plant the old vines, which produce a new crop in three months. All sorts of fruit, hort-cultural and greenhouse plants and bulbous stock are also grown.

thought that fixes itself upon one's mind needs as much "dectoring" as physical disease. It needs to be eradicated from the mind or it will have just the same result as a neglected disease would have. The thought disease would have. The thought disease sometimes cures itself after running its course; so does smallpox. But who would settle down to suffer from smallpox and chance recovery, as thousands of foolish persons settle down to let the thought disease, which has attacked them, do its worst?

Every melancholy thought, every morbid notion and every nagging worry should be resisted to the utmost, and the patient should be physicked by cheerful thoughts, of which there is a store in every one's possession, bright companions—cheaper than drugs and pleasanter.

There have occurred scores of dozens of cancers—cases which admit of no doubt whatever that the diseases resulted from constant morbid fear, the world that it is not a hereditary disease, but morbid minded persons on hearing that there is cancer in their families generally do the very worst thing they can do under the eigenstances—they conceive an awful dread that they will be afflicted with it. They dwell upon the fear constantly, and every triding aliment which troubles them is at first mistaken for the premonitory symptoms of cancer.

A traveler in Persia thus describes a dinner served in the household of a wealthy Persian: "The chief dish consists of a fowl boiled to rags, surrounded by a toothsome mass of rice, hard boiled eggs, fried onlons, almonds and raisins. There is a Shiraz wine, clear, golden red liquid that has traveled over the mountain passes on muleback in a huge glass carboy. Among the desert manna has a conspicuous place. This delicacy is somewhat akin to mougat; it is studded with walnuts and almonds and is jaw sticking to the last degree. FAMOUS GOODWOOD.

Something About a Historic English Race Course.

The Goodwood race course is quite unique. It is a long way from a station and is not near any town, says the London Tatler. It is on a hill the top of which is shaped like a horse-shoe, the space between the two horns being represented by a deep ravine. The course runs round the horseshoe, the start being at the end of one horn and the finish at the end of the other. The result of this is that the equestrians who on other courses contrive to see both start and finish by the simple process of riding across while the race is in progress cannot do so at Goodwood They must elect which they will see and remain there. On the other hand, the course is very easy to follow with glasses.

The races as an institution are comparatively modern, but there must have been hunt races and matches on this course since the days of William III., when we hear of the Goodwood hunt as in existence. In 1800, however, the then Duke of Richmond made a new course, which is practically the present one. In 1801 the course was

A Walking Fern.

A Walking Fern.

Most ferns are confirmed travelers. New fern leaves grow out from the underground roots some distance away from the old plant. The average observer scarcely notices this, but there is a native fern that steps off at so lively a pace that its odd habit has long furnished one of the unceasing entertainments of the woods. The walking fern often carpets ledges and tops of shaded rocks. The slender, tufted leaf fronds are singularly unfernlike in appearance. They squirm about and "walk" by decilning their taper tips to the soil and taking root there and growing. In time clusters of new leaf fronds spring from such rooted tips. By and by some of these, too, bite the earth and, taking root, start still other colonies, which in turn will continue the progress again and again. Naturally, with the lanse of and every trifling allment which troubles them is at first mistaken for the premonitory symptoms of cancer.

An ex-postmaster was one of a group in a city hall corridor recently engaged in discussing queer manifestations of jealousy on the part of young men in love, a dispatch in the morning papers having given rise to the conversation. He said that the most jealous man he ever had knowledge of applied for a position in the postoffice. He brought such excellent recommendations that the postmaster was moved to wonder that the young fellow did not go into mercantile life. Pressed for a reason, he finally confessed that he was giving up a better position in order that as an employee of the postoffice he might not only get his fiancee's letters the sooner, but also might learn whether or not she received mail from any other man.—Philadelphia Times.

[Original.]

A gentleman jumped from a cab, pakl the driver and, selzing a small handbag and a package of umbreilas and canes, stepped briskly into a hotel. His face was cleanly shaven, and he was dressed in a new suit of Scotch tweed with a figure like a checkerboard. From this description he may easily be recognized as belonging to the dramatic profession. At the counter he swung the register around, selzed a pen and entered his name as John Overaker.

"Let me have a blank check," said the gentleman.

The clerk handed him the desired article, and Mr. Overaker filled it out on a New York bank for $50. Handing it to the clerk, he stood as though expecting the money. The clerk hesitated.

"Any time," said the gentleman. "I may not need it till late this evening."
He then turned and followed the beliboy to his room. In half an hour he descended to the dining room, from which he emerged a few minutes before 8 o'clock. He was about to leave the hotel when the clerk called to him:
"I have the money for your check now. Will you kindly step into the office a moment?"
Why he was asked into the office Mr. Overaker could not understand. Nevertheless he stepped through a door beside the coenter and found himself in a small room with two men in police uniform.
"Mr. Overaker," said one of them."

5. As I was with Moses so I will be with thee. I will not fail thee nor forsake thee. Joshua had seen as Moses' minister some of the Lord's deniings with him, and he would doubtless feel that this gracious assurance covered all he could possibly need or desire. Unto all Israel and to Joshua Moses had given very similar words of encouragement (Deut, xxxi, 6-8), but now God Himself speaks to His servant Joshua as He had previously spoken to him by Moses, and the words are the same as we shall see in these following verses. Some say, "Oh, if I could only hear God speak to me!" not believing that In His word He is as truly speaking to them as if they heard an audibie voice from heaven.

The name bucket shop.

The name bucket shop is said to have originated in Chicago when legitimate brokers would not handle an order for less than 5,000 bushels, and a lot of places sprang up where men of small means could speculate on a triffing capital, as small as a dollar, and these speculators were spoken of contemptuously as buying and selling wheat by the bucket full. The term was eventually applied to all brokerage in stocks and grain when the amounts dealt in were smaller than legitimate dealers or brokers would handle and more particularly to places where there were really no legitimate transactions, but where the proprietor and customer simply bet on the market, the proprietor allowing the customer to take either end of the bet in consideration of a commission, which in reality is his percentage in the game.

Why the Major Resigned

Major Clayton of the Tenth native Major Clayton of the Tenth native Infantry, India, was a very obstinate man. One day while in his cups he declared that he would spend three nights in the jungle simply to prove that the tiger was a much abused animal. What the major said when tight rarily into the navy, he always backed up when sober. No he always backed up when sober. No matter how drunk he got, he always clearly remembered the subjects of conversation.

One monding the commanding officer's orderly came round among the officers with an order for them to re-

Kurnool is near the foothills of the Eastern mountains, in the province of Madras, and tigers were as plentiful in the jungles as dogs in the street. In that same year the civil service reported fifty-five people as having been killed by tigers. A detail of fifteen me was sent out a distance of four miles to cut a path and make a little clearing, and before nightfall Major Clayton rode to the spot. He had no weapons of defense and no tent. He simply proposed to sit at the foot of a tree all night and take his chances.

It is still looked upon in India as the biggest fool thing ever indulged in by a white man. Aside from tigers, heyanas and cobras, and there did not seem to be one chance in ten thousand that the major would come off with his life. He did, though. He not only passed one night in the jungle, but three nights, and he came out of it without a scratch. While he made light of the dangers there was no doubt that he seem to be done chance in the hispest done high the hispest with pathers had prowled about within a few yards of him and that he had fought hyenas with a club, but he was in ficined to hold the situation in contempt.

He had not been clear of the service a week when his death occurred.

On the great highway running from Kurnool to Bellary, Cuddopah and Mysore, as on other highways of India, there are government bungalows for the use of travelers. They are simply beliers, as every person must furnish his own food and bedding. Major Clayton had started to ride to Bellary and at midnight took up his quarters in a bungalow. He had a servant with him, and there were several other travelers and their servants. The Old Surf Bath.

It is not so many years ago when surf bathing of a very primitive kind prevailed at the eastern end of Long Island and, for aught I know, at other points. Every Saturday morning or afternoon, as the tide willed, throughout the summer big farm wagons trundled down to the beach and were swung around abreast of the line of breakers. Old fishhcuses served the purpose of modern bathing pavilions, and the sea costumes were those of last year's village street. A long rope was drawn from under the seats and hitched to the wheel, and then some sturdy ex-whaler or life crew man, in red flannel shirt and old trousers tied at the ankles, slipped his wrist through at the ankles, slipped his wrist through the loop at the end of this primitive lifeline and, wading out, kept it as taut joicing in their "Saturday tub."-Out-cestors. Therefore the other birds call him outcast and will have nothing to do with him. But he cares little for that, being a clattering, rattle headed, self satisfied fellow, who seems to do nothing all day long but fish and eat. As you follow him, however, you note with amazement that he does some things marvelously well—better, indeed, than any other of the wood folk. To locate a fish accurately in still water is difficult enough when one thinks of light refraction, but when the fish is moving and the sun glares down into the pool and the wind wrinkles its face into a thousand flashing, changing furrows and ridges, then the bird that can point a bill straight to his fish and hit him fair just behind the gills must have more in his head than the usual chattering gossip that one hears from him on the trout streams.—Country Life in America.

Two Queer Diseases.

Astasia is a nervous affection the peculiar feature of which is the fact that a person suffering from it cannot stand upright. If he tries, he will be stand aprignt. If he cries, he win obliged to hop and jump whenever his feet touch the ground. In a word, his actions are precisely those of a person who might be required to stand upright on a floor composed of redhot coals. Fortunately there are not many coals. Fortunately there are not many cases of this malady on record. Akathisia is the exact opposite of astasia, since a person suffering from it cannot remain seated. The moment he seats himself in a chair he is obliged to start up again. A person afflicted with akathisia can walk easily, but cannot sit, whereas a person suffering from astasia cannot stand upright and cannot walk in the ordinary manner owing to the contraction of his lower limbs.

Unfortunately for the good of the people, the conference held last Friday by President Roosevelt, President Mitchell of the Miners Unions, and the mine owners, failed of any practical results. The failure was due solely to the position taken by the Coal Barone, who refused utterly to have Barone, who refused utterly to have anything to do with Mitchell or the Unions. The action of President Roosevelt is warmly commended by all sensible people everwhere, and the conduct of the mine owners is as universally and indignantly condemned. President Mitchell was fair and honorable. He offered to end the strike if the mine owners would consent to submit the whole trouble to the decision of REPRESENTATIVE CONVEN.

TION.

The Republicans of the 28th Representative District, Woburn-Reading, held their convention to nominate candidates for the Legislature at the Headquarters of the Woburn Ward and City Committee last Wednesday evening. Oct. 8. It was well attended.

James Wilson Grimes, Esq., of Reading was chosen Chairman, and Mr. M. W. True, of Woburn, Secretary.

George F. Hosmer, Esq., presented the name of Mr. Edmund C. Cottle as Woburn's candidate for Representative, and gave good reasons for doing so He then moved that Mr. Cottle be nominated by acclamation, which was done. mit the whole trouble to the decision of Mr. Pratt of Reading presented the name of Mr. Charles H. Nowell as Reading's candidate, and on his motion Mr. Nowell was nominated for the in the same manner.

The General William A. Bancrott, President of the Boston Elevated Railroad Company, is a gentleman whom the people of Boston have reason to honor. At a meeting of wealthy city. Mr. Nowell was nominated for the House in the same manner.

Mr. Nowell accepted the honor in appropriate terms; and a letter was read from Mr. Cottle, the condition of whose health prevented his presence at the convention, in which he accepted the nomination, and returned thanks for the honor. The choice of both of these gentlemen was assured before the convention.

The District Committee, consisting of J. F. Turner and Arthur E Roberts, of Reading; and Herhert S. Riley, J. Fred Leslie, and Frank W. Greydon, of Woburn; were constituted a committee to fill vacancies. Adjourned.

SAMUEL W. MENDUM FOIL CONGRESS.

We have ten minutes to catch the boy earnestly.

"Would you?" Meredith's it came quick and fast. His lips touched her hair as he bent to hear her reply.

The artist was very happy that the others in their party had refused to visit the little town of Goes. It meant a long day with Mrs. Travers.

Meredith felt the small hand on his arm tremble, and drops not all rain fell upon the wet pink cheek. A peculiar, tender smile played about the firm mouth of the young man as he learned, in spite of all contradictions, that Gertrude Travers had a heart. All the long summer he had hopelessly striven to find it, but was obliged to be content with friendship.

Mrs. Travers glanced doubtfully at her companion, but he appeared unconsclous of her emotion. Even then she would not acknowledge to herself how done to her heart, in spite of the Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Young Women:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful."—Netrie Blackmore, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Painful Periods are quickly and permanently overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The above letter is only one of hundreds of thousands which prove this statement to be a fact. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality,—if it is painful something is wrong. Don't take narcotics to deaden the pain, but remove the cause—perhaps it is caused by irregularity or womb displacements, or the development of a tumor. Whatever it is, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is guaranteed to cure it.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality.

LESSON II, FOURTH QUARTER, INTER NATIONAL SERIES, OCT. 12.

Text of the Lesson, Josh, Iii, 9-1v, 7 Memory Verses, 15-17-Golden Text Isn. xIIII, 2-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The topic of our lesson is Israel rossing the Jordan, and the story is fully told in these two chapters from which our lesson is taken. By this great event the Lord would magnify Joshua in the sight of all Israel, that Israel might fear the Lord its God Israel might fear the Lord its God forever and that all the people of the earth might know the hand of the Lord, that it is mighty (iii, 7; iv, 14, 24). The symbol of the presence of God was the ark of the covenant, for it was from above the mercy scat from between the cherubim that He had promised to meet and commune with Moses (Ex. xxv, 22), and at least seven times He is spoken of as dwelling between the cherubim. In the third chapter the ark is mentioned ten times and in the fourth chapter seven times, so that the ark of the covenant or the presence of the Lord in the midst of lorael is really the heart of our lesson. 11-13. Behold the ark of the covenant of he Lord of all the earth passeth over be-ore you into Jordan.

A study of Num. x will show that on

A study of Num. x will show that on the march the ark always had its place in the midst of Israel, six tribes preceding and six tribes following it, and it was distinguished from every other vessel by an outer covering wholly of blue (Num. iv, 5, 6), but on this occasion it went before all the people and preceded them by about 2,000 cubits, that they might know the way by which they must go, for as the officers said, "Ye have not passed this way heretofore" (Josh, iii, 4). As we go on in the daily Christian life we must run with patience, looking unto Jesus, and we must see no one but Jesus only, for He is our only ark, and He alone can lead us in the way wherein we should go (Heb. xil, 1, 2; Mark) we should go (Heb. xii, 1, 2; Mark ix, 8).

14-16. And it came to pass ••• the people passed over right against Jericho.

Thus these three verses begin and end, and they tell us that as soon as the feet of the priests that bore the ark touched the waters of the river the waters from above where Israel was stood upon a heap, and the bed of the river became dry for Israel to pass over. The same living God who divided the Red sea before Israel in the days of Moses did this before the millions of Israel under Joshua that Israel ed the Red sea before Israel in the days of Moses did this before the millions of Israel under Joshua that Israel might see that the Lord was with Joshua nas He had been with Moses and that all the people of the earth might know the mighty hand of the Lord. The same Lord afterward divided this same river for two men and a little later for one man (II Kings ii, 8, 14). We little know what the living God would do for one man willing to be as wholly His as Jesus Christ was, but we do know that His eyes are searching the whole earth to find such people (II Chron. xvi. 9). On this occasion as God said it would be so it came to pass, and so talways does, and the believer may say with the utmost confidence, "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me" (Acts xxvii, 25, 44). Quietness and confidence honor God.

Accepted a Retaining Fee and Then Played His Cilent False.

A lawyer tells how he once played a client false. "I shall have to make a lawyer out of that boy of mine. I don't see any other way out of it," declared the well known attorney, with a laugh. "He came into my office on his way home from school and laid a nickel down on the desk before me. What is this for, son? I asked. 'Retainer,' he answered soberly. 'Very well,' said I, entering into the Joke. 'What have I been retained upon?' My boy dug down anto his pocket and produced a more from his teacher and placed it before me without comment. Is was to the effect that he had been 'cutting up' and advised a whipping. 'Now, what would you advise?' asked he in a businesslike voice after I had read the note and saw the trap that young rascal led me linto.' I think that our first move should be to apply for a change of venue,' said I. 'Very well,' he answered. 'You're handling the case.' Then we will turn the note over to your mother,' said I. I saw the young imp's face fall this, but he braced up and said, 'See her, pop, you're bound to see me through on this, 'cause you've accepted my retainer, you know!' I'll argue your case before the court,' I answered, 'hut you'll have to accept the decision. I would not dare to attempt to influence the court,' well, I pleaded the boy's case, promptly had it thrown out of court, and the boy got what he deserved, a good whipping. A Gluttonous Boy.

A merchant died at Ispahan in the earlier part of last century who had for many years denied himself and his son every support except a crust of coarse bread. On a certain occasion he was overtempted to buy a piece of cheese; but, reproaching himself with extravagance, he put the cheese into a bottle and contented himself and obliged the boy to do the same, with rubbing the crust against the bottle, enjoying the cheese in imagination. One day, returning home later than usual, the merchant found his son eating his crust, which he constantly rubbed against the door.

"An plwat wad Ol want lavin' such a comfortable house as this for?" asked Pat.

"Well," she replied, "you would have more room—more conveniences."

"Convaniences is it?" said Pat, with a smile. "Sure, an' at prisint if Old want to go to the drawin' room or the dinin' room or the conservatory, begoras, O're just got to sit still. Phwat could be handler?"

The lady couldn't say.—London Answers.

Not an Occasion For Haste.

During the Sikh war the late Field Marshal Sir Neville Chamberlain, who then held the rank of colonel, called for volunteers to assist him in blowing up to a bastion. Three or four responded, and the colonel led the little party close up to the point where the mine was to be fired. As soon as the explosion no less than to effect, as speedily as possible to retreat to the safety of the British lines. They had not gone a dozen yards before Chamberlain shouted: "Come back! There's to be no indecent haste, young men.

We'll walk." And walk they did, while the fuse slowly sputtered down to the walting powder.

A Minor Consideration.

The ambitious young woman was attracted by an advertiser elained that by his method failure was impossible. So the ambitious young woman sent on the necessary trilling sum of money, and by return mail she received a slip on which was printed this bir of advice, "Write something."

"But," she protested by letter, "I already have done that, and it hasn't been printed."

"We congratulate you," was the reply. "If you have written something, you already are an author. Publication is a minor consideration, with which we have nothing to do."—Brook lyn Eagle.

Emberton fancied he heard something moving swiftly through the alra thud as of steel entering wood.

The next morning at daylight as the watch moved across Tower hill he discovered the Earl of Emberton lying in a stupor at the foot of the scaffold. He was taken to his home, where he lay for months with a discased brain, and when his reason returned he left London forever. Even in his beloved France he found neither health nor happiness. No one save a menial was ever admitted to his bedroom, and after his death a portrait was discovered beard on the receiption of the matter. I took her home and left her at the lowest step of the door of her house.

When I was arrested for the murder, it at once occurred to me that to prove an alibit I should have to acknowledge that Edna and I had been to a hotel together. No one would when his reason returned he left London forever. Even in his beloved France he found neither health nor happiness. No one save a menial was ever admitted to his bedroom, and after his death a portrait was discovered above his mantel—his avereign's beheaded queen, Anne Boleyn.

"Me mudder sed giv' t'youse."
The teacher opened the bundle to find Tommy's torn shirt with this memorandum:

His Worm Class. "Hello, papa!" cried the daughter of the Wall street operator after the fa-ther reached his porch after his ride out from the city on a suburban train and seated his little one on his knee. "Another new joke?"

"A good one, too," chattered the little girl. "You ought to guess it, but you can't. Now, if a student is a bookworm what kind of a worm are you?"

"Well, that is a hard one. We're all supposed to be worms in one way," said the speculator.

"Yes, but you'd be a tapeworm," broke in the little girl, with a burst of laughter; "you read the ticker tape so much."

"That's right," was the answer.-New York Tribune.

a good one. No reasonable mat object to voting for it. No person in Woburn is bette more favorably, known than Mr. Ed-mund C. Cottle. His home has been here many years and he has a host of acquaintances and friends among all classes of people. He is regarded by verybody as an upright man and worthy citizen, as well as the possessor of excellent business ability. His success as a leather manufacturer abundantly proves that fact. A few years ago Mr. Cottle sold his manufacturing the called off at once, and the miners set to work. stablishment to the American Hide & set to work. THE PAKE.

The attraction at the Park Theatre for the week beginning next Monday, October 20, will be "My Kentucky Home," a play of Southern life and character by J. K. Tillotson. Its plot deals with the incidents of love and war, and its chancters are some on the ward of the southern life and the South. The War itself, however, merely serves as a background for the development of a light and breezy story, which is full of love, pathos, passion, humor and emotion. The general Southern atmosphere will be well preserved and there will be ample opportunity for picturesque scenery and costuming. The cast will bring out the full strength of Mr. Payton's excellent stock company. The matinee performances given daily at the Park Theatre are rapidly becoming mere and more popular, and the

He Had a Conscience.

"Wonderful fellow, that Herlock folmes," remarked the captain a few evenings ago in the smokeroom. "I remember the occasion when I was introduced to him. It was at a crush at the Van Astorbilts. There was an awful crowd, and we were standing up in a corner talking, when all at once I missed my watch.

"What's the matter? inquired the detective when he noticed that I was upset, and I told him. "Looking at the time, he observed, speaking so as to be heard for a yard or two around, 'Gentlemen, my friend here has lost his watch, but fortunately it is a striking repeater, and as it is here has lost his watch, but fortunately it is a striking repeater, and as it is ten the tale, but such was the experience of one John Bartendale, who was executed at York in 1634 for felony. After his body had hung for nearly an hour it was burled. A gentleman passing by the grave, which had not been filled up, thought he saw the earth move, and with the help of his servant he disinterred the convict, who was still alive.

Hanged and Buried and Lived. It is not given to many men to ged and buried and yet be ab

It was the custom in those days to bury sulcides and executed criminals without any coffin. The man was carefully treated and entirely recovered. He became hostler at the coaching house in York and lived a most exemplary life. When asked what he could tell in relation to hanging, as having experienced it, he replied, "That when I was turned off flashes of fire seemed to dart from my eyes, from which I fell into a state of darkness and insensibility."

"No, I am not a believer in the natural," said the hard headed Nevertheless, she went on to

"You don't know my faults."

"If you possess all there are in the

"I should do all in my power to protect you from the consequences or

I tried to bring her to a decision, but I could not, and I was obliged to leave

I did not doubt that she suffered from some such cause as she had mentioned, though I knew it was not drink and I did not believe it to be gambling. She had named these as on a beautiful lake. It was toward on a beautiful fight. It was toward the end of the season, and as most of the guests had been there for five or six weeks we were all acquainted. One afternoon we were listening to music in the parlor when the landlor entered and announced that one of the guests had lost a valuable jewel. The guests had lost a valuable jewel. The greyants had been searched and nothguests had lost a valuable jewel. The servants had been searched and nothing found. Would every guest consent to the same process? The question was put to a vote and carried unanimously.

The doors were locked, and the searching began. While it was going on my eyes fell on the girl I loved, and I soon noticed that whenever the searchers came near her she moved away. After I had been searched she came and stood beside me. I felt her hand against mine, and she placed within it a small box. Then she moved away and in a few minutes submitted to be searched, evidently relieved of a great dread. After she had been searched she passed by where I was standing, giving me a supplicating lock either a research to the process of the searched searched as passed by where I was standing, giving me a supplicating lock either a research to the process of the searched in the searched searched to the process of the searched searched to the process of the searched searched searched the passed by where I was standing, giving me a supplicating lock either a research the target and the searched the passed to the process of the searched to the process of the process standing, giving me a supplicating look, either a request that I would not betray her or blame her—I could not tell which.

All was clear to me now. The fault she would not name was kleptomania. It would be impossible to describe my emotions. When I felt her passing the box, it seemed as if I had been bitten by a rattlesnake. Nevertheless for her sake I took it and concealed it. When she looked her appeal, I had realized the situation—she was not a thief for gain; she stole because she was impelled to do so. But think of a man accepting such a defect in his wife, entgring upon matrimony knowing that at any moment she would be liable to bring disgrace upon herself, him, their children! I turned, looked out through a window and shook convulsively. My soul was wedded to this woman, and I suffered the same as if she were already my wife.

Some one touched my shoulder, and I turned. She was looking up at me, her eyes full of gratitude and love. The search was ended, the doors were open, and the guests were leaving the room. The jewel had not been found. "Come," she said, "for a walk." Mechanically I followed her to the margin of the lake. She stepped into one of the cedar rowboats there, and I entered after her, she taking the tiller, I the oars. I pulled away from All was clear to me now. The fault

of Pinkham Cures

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant,—not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the whole uterine system, positively CURING disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

One of Many Women Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Without Submitting to an Operation, Writes:-

"Dear Mrs. Piskiam:—I was a great sufferer for three years, had some of the leading physicians, and they all said nothing but an operation would cure me, but to that I would not submit.

"I picked up a paper and saw your advertisement and made up my mind to try your medicine. I had falling and inflammation of the womb and a flow of whites all the time, pains across small of back, severe headache, did not know what it was to be without a pain or an ache until I used your medicine. After three months' use of it, I felt like a new woman. I still sound the praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. A. Cowan, 1804 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.

A Graduate Nurse, Convinced by Cures, Endorses Lydia E. Pinkham's

"Dear Mrs. Pinkinam's Vegetable Compound. She Writes:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkinam's — Ministering to the sick I have had numerous chances to compare Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with other medicines in cases of diseases of women, and the number of cures recorded where your medicine was used convinced me that it is the safest and surest medicine for a sick woman. Doctors certainly must know the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am convinced that you deserve the splendid record you have made. — Yours very truly, Mrs. Catherine Jackson, 769 Beaubien St., Detroit, Mich." (Graduate Nurse and President Detroit Emergency Association.)

Many Physicians Admit that no Medicine Known to the Profession Equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound for the Cure of Woman's Ills, and We are Permitted to Publish the Following: -

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—It gives me great pleasure to state that I have found Lydin E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and have often prescribed it for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for uterine trouble some two years ago, and my youngest daughter is using it for female weakness, and as a tonic, and is slowly but surely gaining strength and health.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all disorders which women are subject to, and give it honest endorsement. — Yours very truly, Sarah C. Brigham, M.D., 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass."

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it can be relied upon to effect a cure.

• Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had such a vast and successful experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice.

Mechanically I followed her to the margin of the falke. She stepped into one of the cedar rowboots there, and I entered after her, she taking the third of the cars. Two Things That Scare a Negro.
Two seemingly harmless things excite the feer of the southern negro.
One is the cracking of the finger joints; the other is to be stepped over as he lies prone upon the ground. The cracking of the finger joints seems to suggest to the negro imagination the ratuling of a skeleton's bones, while to be stepped over is regarded as likely to bring bad luck to grown folks and to check the growth of children. A half grown negro boy will sternly command a playfellow who has stepped over his body to step back in order that the spell may be removed.

"Mother," remarked the beautiful girl, "I think Harry must be going to propose to me."

The bush and the vine do not look alike, but both have coarse toothed, oral pointed leaves. These are always three in a group, and the plant also bears small greenish white berries."

Poison oat, otherwise Rhus radicans, and poison sumac, or Rhus vinenta, are other plants to be avoided by visitors to the woods. The sumac has groups of four leaflets, oval pointed in form, arranged on a tapering stem. It differs from the real sumac in so far that its leaflets incline upward. In the autumn the foliage is a brilliant scarlet. The little berries look like grayish white grapes.

A good antidote for ivy poisoning in its first stages is a solution of ordinary baking soda. A bottle containing a pint of water and a heaping teaspoonful of baking soda is carried by many persons who take walks in the woods, for, while some people may handle the poison vines without danger, others are poisoned if they pass within twelve feet of them.—New York Tribune.

Europe run up along our coast until they reach the neighborhood of Newfoundland before starting across to their destination in Ireland or France.
The reason for this is found in the range of submarine tablelands, forming an ideal cable bed, which lies between the three latter countries.

Without an exception his talk and manners have made a favorable imwill poll the entire Republican vote of this city cannot be doubted.

Woburn Republicans ought to do better by the Reading candidate this year than they have been in the habit of doing. They should be as loyal and of doing. They should be as loyal and bearinest in support of Mr. Nowell as in behalf of Mr. Cottle. It has been too much the habit of Woburn Republicans to take care of the home candidate and let the Reading candidate look out for himself. This ought not to be. Mr. Nowell has been nominated by the Republicans of the District and not a fraction of them, and should be cordially supported by both towns. We have no doubt he will be. To be sure, Mr. Aldrich is a good and popular man. Mr. Aldrich is a good and popular man, but he is a Democrat and therefore is not entitled to, and cannot expect, Republican help at the polls. BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

Business at the Boston Music Hall, under the management of Messrs. Stair and Wilbur, has been of "standing room only" proportions almost since the opening night and it is a common sight for late comers to find the "House Sold Out" sign conspicuously displayed over the box office window. Nothing compared with the business which this theatre is doing has been heard of in Boston before in recent years and only serves to demonstrate the fact that the policy pursued by the new management in presenting nothing but the very lighest grade of stage attractions at popular prices is meeting with the favor of the prices is meeting with the favor of t

BOSTON MUSEUM.

There is now being offered at the Boston Museum one of the best and most wholesome entertainments that have ever graced its historic stage. This is duced under the auspices of Charles Frohman, by the distinguished London actor-manager, Charles Hawtrey and his own company. This play has had more prosperity and longer life than any modern piece. It was acted 569 consecutive times in London, and all last season at the Garrick Theatre, N. Y. In Boston it has been received with equal enthusiasm and the Museum is nightly on the heat of the current of a Messenger from Mars. The unearthly visitor takes the hero amid scenes of misery and suffering, and making through his magic power walls open, discloses his friends careless and indifferent to his own misfortunes. When even then him instantly into a beggar. This momentary transformation is one of the cleverest pieces of stage illusion ever seen. THE PARK.

Preparations for the elaborate revival of "Paust" by Corse Payton's stock company at the Park Theatre have been in progress for some time, and it will begin a run of one week only next Monday, October 27. This familiar stage classic has not been in Boston for several seasons, and its presentation here under such favorable auspices will be more than doubly welcome. The stage settings and effects will be in every way complete, the costumes will be strikingly appropriate, and the entire production to the property of the cost of the production without inconvenience or discomfort. The prices, moreover, range from ten to fifty cents in the afternoon, and from ten to fifty cents in the evening. The music furnished by the orchestra before the performance and between the acts is especially enjoyable. At the cast is especially enjoyable. At the will be held on the stage at the close of the performance, all the ladies and children in the audience being invited to attend and to meet Una Abell Brin ker, the leading lady of Mr. Payton's stock company. Week after next, "Josephine Empress of the French" will be the attraction.

Gen. Appleton's Place.

Gen. Francis H. Appleton, who was nominated for Senator by acclamation in the Middlesex-Essex convention, comes down to the State House foredoomed to a place on the Committee on Agriculture. He is a farmer and runs a 200-acre farm in Peabody and is President of a local agricultural society and that makes his fate certain. As it happens, though, the Committee on Agriculture is said to be the least of the desires of the gentleman farmer. He is reported to have his mind set on some other committee place which will not perhaps be so close to the heart of nature and yet possibly will be a little more in the public eye. The fact that he is fore-doomed also to have a place on the Committee on Education, by virtue of the fact that he is a Trustee of the Agricultural College, will not lighten his burden or make him feel the happier.—

two Methods by Which You May Determine Its Quality.

The supply of drinking water for the family should be tested at least once a year. Water that at one time is a year. Water that at one time is pure and wholesome may become too impure for use, yet it may be without color, and have no odor or taste to show its dangerous qualities.

A simple test of drinking water is the Meisch sewage test. Fill a clean pint bottle three-quarters full of the water to be tested, and dissolve in it half a teaspoonful of granulated sugar. Cork it and set it in a warm place for two days. If during this time it becomes cloudy or milky it is unfit for domestic use. If it remains perfectly clear it is probably safe. Be careful that the bottle is absolutely as clean as you can make it and the sugar pure.

The Hawaiian as a Diver.

The Hawatian as a Diver.

The working crews of the Hawaiian Islands were quartered in suitable camps near their field of labor. They were natives, good fellows, willing workers, admirably adapted to the duty required of them, which was largely in beats and in the water. I well remember one who excelled in diving. On a certain occasion, when the placing of a deep water mooring had just been accomplished, it became necessary to detach under water the end of a hawser, which had been made fast to the submerged part of a spar buoy about forty or fifty feet below the surface of the sea. The man was told to take his sheath knife down with him and cut the hawser as near its end as he could, so as to lose as little as possible of the valuable cable. Taking his knife in his teeth, he disappeared beneath the water and remained out of sight so long that he was almost given up for lost, when he suddenly reappeared, and on being asked if he had cut the hawser as he had been told to reported that he had unbent it without cutting off any part of it whatever.—James D. influences of city life and now proposed to become a part of a small community where his identity would not be lost. He would thus have every opportunity to acquire distinction. Reginald spent the summer before entering on the practice of the law at Thistledown, the country residence of his uncle, where he met, among other guests, Marion Blythe. Marion was a dashing girl who, if she had been born a man, would have been more devoted to, studying the points of winning horses on the turf than the principles laid down by Blackstone. Reginald fell desperately in love with her, and, though she did not reveal her preference for him, he at times felt sure she loved him.

Reasons of convenience, however, had seemed to determine Marion's future. She had been brought up to wealth, but her father had died insolvent. Her out her father had died insolvent. Her mother had planned for her to marry a rich man. Indeed, it had been ar-ranged that Howard Blakely, the es-timated owner of half a million, should meet her at Thistledown for the purpose of becoming her husband. He possessed one trait in common with Marion—he was devoted to those sports in which money is lost and won. The young men at Thistledown did not young men at Thistledown did not scruple to play poker in the drawing room after the ladies had retired to their rooms, and some of the latter occasionally remained to watch the game. Gambling in any form was not in accordance with Reginald's plans, and he resolutely kept aloof.

"Reginald," said Marion one evening when both ware weaking the second

Now, Blakely was at the time betting high and losing with admirable good nature. Reginald felt that he was overshadowed in Marion's good graces by the man's especial proclivity, and it fretted him. "Give me $10 in chips," he said to the banker and was soon playing with the rest.

This was the beginning. The ending was one night when all had dropped out of the game except Emory and Blakely, the others having gone to a fete. Marion had come down looking very charming in evening costume, ready to go with the others, but, seeing Emory and Blakely over the cards, had remained to watch them play. Emory had developed a remarkable intuitive foresight when to take risks, and, though Marion was not aware of it, a portion of Blakely's fortune had passed to Emory.

"That exhausts my bank account," said Blakely after losing an enormous pot, "but I have certificates showing a deposit of $200,000 in stocks and bonds at my broker's."

"Never mind the certificates," replied Emory. "Your word is sufficient."

The night wore on. The men continued to but the with late and the part of the power than the process.

like one in a trance. The change from affluence to poverty was so appalling that he was benumbed by it. Finally he arose and took Emory apart. There the two returned to the table. Having each been dealt a hand and drawn, they showed their cards.

"Three kings." said Blakely.
"Full of tens," said Emory.
Blakely arose and, with a melancholy

School days are danger days for American girls.

Often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality. Sometimes it is never recovered.

Perhaps they are not over-careful about keeping their feet dry; through carelessness in this respect the monthly sickness is usually rendered very severe.

Then begin ailments which should be removed at once, or they will produce constant suffering. Headache, faintness, slight vertigo, pains in the back and loins, irregularity, loss of sleep and appetite, a tendency to avoid the society of others, are symptoms all indicating that woman's arch-enemy is at hand.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped many a young girl over this critical period. With it they have gone through their trials with courage and safety. With its proper use the young girl is safe from the peculiar dangers of school years and prepared for hearty womanhood.

FILTHY MECCA.

FILTHY MECCA.

The Holy City is the Dirtiest Spot is All Islam.

Mecca, the holy city of the faith, is called by many names. Some call it "the Mother of Purity," "the Citaded of Arabs," "the Holy Mosque." Others speak of it as "the Mother of Compassion," "the Supreme Sanctity," "the Guardian Angel of Ajem." The devout never utter the word Mecca without adding to it some adjective of praise, such as "the blessed," "the exalted," "the great," "the highly esteemed," and so on. The town itself is about two miles in length and one mile in breadth.

The dirtier the pilgrim keeps himself the more respected he is as a pious Moslem. Consequently Mecca, being as it is the most sacred city of the faith, is literally the filthiest in Islam. The most important streets measure about ten yards in width. The rest are mere lanes, wonderfully and picturesquely crooked and some six feet wide. The streets were crowded with tents, camels, mules, asses, horses, pariah dogs and a motley crowd of pilgrims, unspeakably disheveled and unwashed, while the lanes were absolutely filled with every kind of offal and refuse. Mecca, which lies in a hollow, would be a regular cesspool were it not for the parfah dogs, lean, snarling brutes of a bright yellowish color, that serve the purpose of scavengers, and the fierce, dry, Arabian sun that is the sole sanitary inspector in the country. The din the dogs make at night is indescribable. A pack of jackals would be quiet in comparison.

Hair Needs Exercise.

One reason why so many men are bald, according to a foreign medical journal, is because they allow their hair to die through want of exercise.

journal, is because they allow their hair to die through want of exercise. Under the skin which covers the head are several muscles, it explains, and these are never stirred into activity, the result being that they do not perform their proper function, and consequently the skin is insufficiently nourished and the hair gradually dies. "Women," it continues, "do not become bald, and the reason is because they spend much more time combing and arranging their hair than men do. During this operation the skin on the head is stirred into activity, and as a result the muscles remain active and the hair flourishes. "It is evident, therefore, that the best way to prevent baldness is to rub the skin frequently and vigorously, for unless this is done the muscles will be unable to supply it with the proper amount of nourishment."

John Randolph's Appearance.

Washington Irving when secretary of legation in London was much amused at the rollicking good humor with which William IV, began his reign, and he once tried to give a lesson in dignity to the Duke of Sussex. He had to necompany an eccentric friend of meager and limping figure, who persisted in wearing an extraordinary nondescript garb instead of the prescribed court dress to St. James'. The ushers demurred; the foreign minister smiled. The Duke of Sussex stopped Irving as he passed and whispered, moving his thumb Jerkingly up and down, "Who's your friend Hoky Poky?" "That, sir," replied Irving emphatically, "is John Randolph, United States minister to Russia and one of the most distinguished orators of America." It was all in vain. Some time afterward Irving was dining with the duke, whose first laughing inquiry was, "And how is our friend Hoky Poky?"—Temple Bar.

All through the wilderness wanderings, as the many thousands died who were men when Joshua and Caleb spled out the land, Caleb held fast the word of Jehovah by the mouth of Moses that whoever else might die His servant Caleb would enter the land and possess it, because he whoily followed the Lord. We think of Paul in the storm at sea when all hope was given up, saying to the souls on that ship as he gave them the Lord's message, "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me" (Acts xxvii, 25).

Executive Department.
Boston, Oct. 27th, 1902. Hon. Alphus Sanford,

President, Chicatawbut Club, Boston

My dear Sir :-I thank you for your kind invita-tion to attend the dinner of the Chicathat to attend the dinner of the Chica-tawbut Club this evening, and regret ahat owing to a previous engagement I shall be unable to be present; other-wise, I should be glad to join with you in an endorsment of the Republican candidates for the State election.

Lieutenant Governor John L. Bates. our candidate for Governor, with whom I have had the honor and pleasure of being associated during the past three years, has been a most valuable assist-ant, in full accord with me on all imand, to full accord with me on all im-portant matters that I have acted upon during my administration. Owing to his accurate and comprehensive knowl-edge of the affairs of the Common wealth and his broad and sensible views of public questions, he can be depended upon to discharge the duties of the office of Governor to the satisfaction of all the people.

He is a most worthy candidate and is entitled to the united support of the Republican party.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) W. MURRAY CRANE. vided.

Next Tuesday comes the tag of war.
On that day the two great political Parties and several little ones will meet at the polls and try titles to all the offices in the St. Parties and several little ones will meet at the polls and try titles to all the offices in the State from Governor down to the back towns Representative in the Legislature.

The ballotboxes will yield poor returns for the Democracy, judging from present appearances, and why any member of that Party should crave to be a candidate for office and even figh for a nomination, as they sometimes do, is a mystery. They may elect a couple or 3 Congressmen and a few scattering members of the Legislature,

It is currently reported that Brady has sued three of his fellow Aldermen for defamation of character, or something of that kind, and attached their property to the amount of $5,000 each. Some of them would like to have him find the property.

Laugh and Live.

Prince Jerome Napoleon was fond of telling the story of his scheme during the Crimean war by which he kept up the spirits of his men. The French army was losing daily large numbers of men through the ravages of the cholera. Marshal Canrobert sent the order to Prince Jerome that he should move his division to Varna. Jerome issued marching orders and added: "Seek out in every regiment all the actors, comedians, clowns, conjurers and enarmy was losing daily large numbers of men through the ravages of the cholera. Marshal Canrobert sent the cholera. Marshal Canrobert sent the cholera. Marshal Canrobert sent the cholera day to the division. Prince Jerome is not famous for any remarkable military friumphs, but this one act must at least be put to his credit, for it was undoubtedly due to this method of cheering up his men that his division undoubtedly due to this method of cheering up his men that his division acould boast a death rol at least three times as small as that of any other. These performances were the forerunner of the now famous Zouave theater in the Crimea.

The period of deepest sleep varies from 3 o'clock to 5. An hour or two after going to bed you sleep very soundly; then your slumber grows gradually lighter, and it is easy enough to waken you at 1 or 2 o'clock, but when 4 o'clock comes you are in such a state of somnolence that it would take a great deal to waken you.

where all good Romanists go at sunset, look out and see how dense is the atmosphere between you and St. Peter's dome. That same thick air is all over Europe, all around the Mediterranean, even over in Mesopotamia and by the banks of the Ganges. It has been breathed and burned and battle smoked for 10,000 years.

Ride up and over the high tablelands of Montana—one can still ride there for days without seeing a trace of humanity—and how clear and scentless, how absolutely intangible, that sky blown, sunshot atmosphere! You breathe it without feeling it, you see through it a hundred miles, and the picture is not blurred by it. Once more ride over the euchanted means of Arizona at surrise or sunset, with the ragged mountains of Mexico to the south of you and the broken spurs of the great Sierra around about you, and all the glory of the old shall be as nothing to the gold and purple and burning crimson of this new world.

Georgia Trent was the most unattractive child in the school. Pale, freekled, wenzened, nothing but skin and bone, her clothes hung upon her as if she had been a skeleton doll. Her homeliness always showed most in contrast when she stood beside her cousin, Clara Doolittle, a plump, rosy girl, with robin egg eyes and yellow hair. Clara was the belle of the school. hair. Clara was the belie of the school.

All the boys who were girls' boys were in love with her. I was a boys' boy myself, but this did not prevent my having a secret admiration for her. As for Georgia, I thought no more of her than of a starved kitten.

It so happened, however, that Georgia It so happened, however, that Georgia became connected with an episode in my school life. Jim Atherton was the bully of the school, while I was vice bully. Jim could thrash me, and I could thrash all the other boys. I was not satisfied to be second best, and one vacation I pounded sand bags, pulled weights and ran long distances in order to be able to tackle Jim next term. der to be able to tackle Jim next term

When we got back to school in September, I looked for a pretext for a fight. Jim was an overbearing fellow, with no mind for the rights of others, and was not long in giving me an op-portunity. One recess I went out on to the playground, to see him holding up portunity. One recess I went out on to the playground, to see him holding up Georgia Trent, who was screaming vociferously, by the ears, while Clara Doolittle stood by laughing. Here was my chance—not that I sympathized especially with Georgia, for children are not sympathetic as a rule. If there was any other motive than the one I have mentioned, it was to try my strength and skill before Clara. I demanded the release of Georgia, where-upon followed the expected scrimmage. Despite my preparation, I got the worst of it, and as I limped off the field I had the mortification to see Clara make a face at me. Her scorn only intensified whatever of feeling I had had for her.

Ten years passed. I had been separated from these two girls, forgetting Georgia entirely, but treasuring a schoolboy longing for her cousin. Before entering upon the practice of my profession I determined to take a summer vacation and spend it at my old home. I learned that the cousins had been left alone in the world and were living together. Both were in mourning and saw little or no company. I went to the house and sent up a card, or, rather, two cards, for I had grown conventional, and, though I did not care to see Georgia, I was not so un-forward with extended hand.

"Is it possible," she said, "that you are George Putnam? I would never have known you."

"I would have known you if I had met you among a thousand and had no inkling as to whom you were."

"Haven't I improved?" she asked,
with the suspicion of a pout.

"There was no room for improvement. I see the same rosy cheek and bright eye that I used to admire when we were schoolfellows. Of course you have developed from a child to a woman, all your features gaining immensely by the change, but they are the same features."

She looked at me curiously, as if she doubted my sincerity, whereupon, half in earnest, half jestingly, I told her that I had been her ardent admirer while at school and had treasured her image in my heart ever since. After I left her it occurred to me that I had forgotten to ask after her cousin. I was much mortified, but the omission was not to be corrected.

The next time I called my first words were, "And where is your cousin Georgia?"

1. The Lord also spake unto Joshua.

How important and how wonderful a statement, but how little heed one is apt to give to it! That the only living and true God should talk with a mortal man should be enough to make all mortals give heed and earnestly inquire as to what He said. Men waste time talking of trivial matters, but not so the Lord. He never says anything unimportant. "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth, for the Lord hath spoken" (Isa. 1, 2; Deut. xxxii, 1). "God, who ear, O earth, for the Lord hath spoken" (Isa. 1, 2; Deut. xxxii, 1). whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses.

In Ex. xxi, 13; Num. xxxv, 6, 11; Deut xix, 2, 9, we find that which God had said to Moses concerning these cities, three on each side of Jordan. Every purpose of the Lord shall be performed both for His people and against His enemies. This matter of these cities was in His purpose, as He had said to Moses, and now the time had come to perform His purpose. From all eternity everything that ever has come to pass or ever will come to pass was all foreseen or foreordained by God (Acts xv, 18; Eph. iii, 11).

He shall dwell in that city until the Ed Ed at a trial Ed of the city before the death of the high priest, the avenger was free to kill him if he found him (Num xxv, 26-28), and here is a suggestion of the truth that by the death of our High Priest on the cross in our stead we are made free from all condemnation. It is His resurrection from the dead that really makes us free, for if He be not risen we are yet in our sins (I Cor. xv, 17). 7-9. These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel and for the stranger that solourneth among them that whoseever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither.

whoseever killeth any person at unawares might dee thither.

Note God's appointed refuge for Is-rael or the stranger, and note also the blessed "whoseever" reminding us of John ill, 16; Rev. xxii, 17. According to Canon Fausset, the very name of each city is suggestive of the Lord Jesus Christ—Kedesh, holy (Heb. vii, 26); Shechem, shoulder (Isa, Ix, 6); Hebron, fellowship (I Cor. I, 9); Bezer, fortress (Ps. xviii, 27; Ramoth, high (Acts v, 31); Golan, Joy (Rom. v, 11; Ps. xiiii, 4). While it is not possible for those who are truly in Christ ever to be lost, according to John x, 27-29, yet a truly saved person may not live in the fellowship which is his privilege and hereafter (I Cor. iii, 14, 15).

A clergyman who had neglected all knowledge of nautical affairs was asked to deliver an address before an audience of sailors.

He was discoursing on the stormy passages of life. Thinking he could make his remarks more pertinent to his hearers by metaphorically using sea expressions, he said:

"Now, friends, you know that when you are at sea in a storm the thing you do is anchor."

At the turn of the drive in front of the great door they found Hall. He had been thrown under the spreading branches of a silvery green pine, and when they drew him gently out and laid him on the graveled walk his heart was still bearing, but his neck was frightfully discolored and his tongue, black and swollen, protruded between his teeth.

The house was found tightly closed, and not until the authorities were sent for could they force the door open. They were locked on the inside, and when the great door that led to the saloon was forced the chain was in its place, as was the case with the door by the mantelpiece. The shutters were also tightly closed, and a small fire still burned upon the hearth.

Peters and Townsend were inside the great room—what there was left of them. But no man could say which was which. Hall was taken to the hospital and everything possible done for him, but it was fifteen days before the light of reason came back to the bold eyes, and at the first look the doctor knew it was but the light before eternal 35 darkness.

FOR BETTER GOVERNMENT. We hear that there is to be a gather ing of the friends of good local governing of the friends of good local govern-ment at the Headquarters of the Re-publican Ward and City Committee this evening to discuss matters con-cerning the city election next month. The new Caucus Law compels such preliminary cosultations if the caucus — Read H. would amount to anything better than and charcoal ad. a farce.

— Bribery investigation cases we come up this evening at City Hall.

that, instead of selecting delegates to a that, instead of selecting delegates to convention to nominate a Mayor, Alderman-at-Large, and other candi-dates, they are to be voted for directly in the caucuses, those receiving the highest number of votes to be certified abolished and direct caucus voting taking its place. A moment's thought will convince anyone that, if anything is to be accomplished at the caucuses.

— Fi there must be previous arrangements for them. Without this a hundred men may attend, each vote for a fav-orite candidate for Mayor, etc., with the probable result that some unworthy person would capture the nomination against the wishes and better judg-ment of the large majority. This must be plain to anyone who stops to think about it.

To guard against this, preliminary meetings must be held and measures adopted for the accomplishment of the objects sought for at the caucuses.

The conference this evening in Buckman Block is to be open to every-body. More than that, every voter in the city who wants to see a better city government for Woburn and is willing to work for one, is earnestly requested to attend and participate in requested to attend and participate in its deliberations.

A characteristic of their guest, Miss Anastasia Reade of Woburn.

A change of administration can be brought about next month by hard work, sacrifices, concessions, harmonious action, a hearty pulling together, and a determination to win, and in Republicans and Democrats, indeed, well wishers of the city in all quarters of it, are earcestly discussing the necessity of a change in our municipal administration, and means to bring it about. This is appeared to the control of well wishers of the city in all quarters of it, are earnosetly discussing the necessity of a change in our municipal administration, and means to bring it about. This is encouraging. The character and conduct of the present Council have led to a determination on the part of the respectable portion of the community to throw them overboard at the coming election and elect better men to fill their places. They have scandalized our city and caused it to become a reproach and a place of ill-repute, and reputable citizens are ashamed of its evil notoriety.

These facts are realized by the decent people, and a change for the better has been decided on. But mere talk will not accomplish it; there must be work. All good men, irrespective of party or creed, must join hands and work shoulder to should the stream of the tors, the should the stream of the tor

Mr. Laurence Reade is the log cal Democratic candidate for Mayor. His canvas last year fixed things all right for him this time. Of course, Brady, Holland, Carroll, Hooper and Brady, Holland, Carroll, Rooper and others will try hard to capture the nomination, but with Reade in the field neither of those gentlemen can spin a thread. Still, the declination of May-or Feeney to run again has thrown the Democratic camp into great confusion — The reception given by Congressman McCall, Senatorial candidate, Francis. Appleton, Esq. and Representative candidates. Cottle and Nowell at the Headquarters of the Woburn Ward and City Committee last Saturday evening, was a pleasant and profitable affair. Many prominent Republicans, ware present, the fair Republicans were present, the fair town of Reading sending over a choice lot of them, several of whom made speeches.

— The decline of the American Bicycle Trust goes to show that booms are not healthy things to have around. Five or six years ago there was a bicycle "craze;" everybody must have one; as is invariably the case, the boom busted; the craze petered out; great fortunes were sunk; and the Trust has slumped through. Col. Pope of Boston, who was at the head of it, attributes the ill success to lack of advertising.

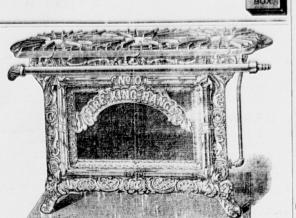

- It is feared that the love of money. — It is teared that the love of money, which is pronounced the root of all evil, has led to the cutting down for firewood some fine groves hereabouts, and in such cases great damage has been done to the beauty of the scenery. Woods are often attractive features of a landscape, but some folks think they look better reduced to dollars and snugly stowed away in one's pocket-book. Which brings to mind the saying "there is no accounting for tastes.

Last night was the end of the house party. There was a dance, and champagne flowed like water.
What did we do after supper? I have a confused remembrance of something going on in the backelor quarters. West theying or fencing? Was it boxing or fencing?

Where is my handkerchief? I reach for my dinner jacket on a chair beside my bed and take my handkerchief from the pocket. With it comes a slip of paper. On it is a hasty scrawl in pencil in a feminine hand:

Consider our acquaintance ended. M. Heavens! I have disgraced myself, and Mollie has discarded me. How, when, did it happen? After supper, when we were rounding in the drawing room? I don't remember Mollie being there. I must get up at once, go to her and beg forgiveness. Where is my watch? Only 6 o'clock! Not a person watch? Only 6 o'clock! Not a person will be down before 9. Meanwhile I must toss about in bed, banging the pillow with my head, which aches more and more every minute. Oh, that man should put an enemy into his mouth to steal away his brains! I have not tasted alcoholic drink for six have not tasted alcoholic drink for six months before last night, and I solemly resolve never to taste it again. What could I have said or done to offend her? Doubtless talked thick and showed in other ways that I had been drinking. No wonder she wrote that slip. She, in all her purify, to mate with one who could so forget himself! But when did I receive it? Who brought it to me? How can I expect to remember that since I cannot remember other matters? It is all over between us. Mollie will never overlook my conduct. I'm ruined. I turned over, burled my face under the bedclothes and groaned.

I turned over, burled my face under the bedelothes and groaned.

I looked at my watch every ten minutes. The intervals seemed half an hour. When it was 8 o'clock, I got up, dressed and went downstairs. The house was as still as death. At 9 o'clock I heard a servant in the dining room, and, going in there, I asked for a cup of coffee. This made me feel somewhat more comfortable. Returning to my room, I lay down and dozed till 10 o'clock, then went downstairs again. Most of the guests were at breakfast. I joined them, drank another cup of coffee and swallowed a piece of toast with difficulty. Then I went into the smoking room. Molite had not yet come down, and I wanted to get out of the way, avoiding a meeting with her in the presence of others. I lighted a cigar, but it tasted bad, and I threw it away. Bob Anderson came in and sat down opposite me. He lit a cigar and sat smoking ruefully. I saw that something was on his mind, and as Bob is a communicative fellow I felt sure it would come out. Presently

"That was an awful oreak? I made at the supper table."

"Yes, it was," I replied.

"The confounded bottle slipped out of my hand. Is there no way to get a wine stain out of silk?"

"None. But you can buy a new dress, I suppose."

"None. But you can buy a new dress, I suppose."
"Buy Marion Hunt a new dress! That's what made all the trouble. I offered to do so, and she resented the offer, taking it as an insult. Her father is rich, and she has a fine income in her own right."

"Well, Bob, don't worry. I'm in a worse fix than you. I offended my fiancee, and it is all over between us."

"Found it this morning in the pocket of my dinner jacket."

"Why, it's the identical paper Marion Hunt sent me."

"What!"

"What!"

"When I covered her dress with a whole bottle of wine, she went upstairs very angry. I scribbled a few words to her begging permission to present her with another dress. She tore off a piece of my note and wrote that on it. But, really, how did you get it?"

It seemed as if a thousand pounds were taken off my shoulders.

"What did we do after supper?" I asked.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who suggests something else has no interest in your case. He is seeking a larger profit. Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that the thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

When the daylight falls, all the booty is bound up in cloths and carried home on the heads of the gleaners. At home they thrash it out by hand and sell the grain or use it for their chickens. The gathering of a half peck is usually a full day's work for a child, and often a woman spends a whole day in gathering very little more. Gleaning, however, is looked upon somewhat in the light of a picnic.

Before the words were all uttered the congregation was pouring out of the church, each family being anxious to make sure that its home was not on fire. It need hardly be said that the fire existed only in the pastor's imag-

the voters of the city certain persons as candidates for nomination at the caucuses. This was what the meeting was called for and all it could do.

Nevertheless, those who attended and took part in the proceedings were and are honorably bound to abide by its decision. It is fair to assume that the voters present will view their obligations in that light and give a cordial support to the people recommended for support to the people recommended for caucus candidates.

caucus candidates.

Mr. Elwyn G. Preston was unanimously selected for the office of Mayor.

He has been too long in the public service, and is too well known personally, to require of the JOURNAL special notice of his character or qualifications for the office. He has filled various positions in the Woburn city government, and all of them in the best possible manner. His administration as Water Commissioner, a post of honor he now fills, has been a remarkable financial success. His long occupancy of the office of Secretary of the Boston Chamber of Commerce shows what the business men of that city think of him. The simple fact is, there is not a man in Woburn better fitted for Mayor than Mr. Preston, and what is more, that point is universally con ceded.

Herbert S. Riley, Lizzie B. Blake, and Frank E. Cotton, were chosen to be presented as School Committee's candidates for renomination at the caucuses. They have performed good serviceis n the years past, and there is no reason to doubt their usefulness, if elected, in the future. elected, in the future.

The meeting selected Mr. Michael J. Kennedy for renomination for the Board of Public Works. We know but little about him, but that little is all in his favor. He is said to be a bright, intelligent gentleman, and a faithful and efficient public officer.

These are the people the mass meeting picked out and recommend to all voters who wish to see a change in our municipal affairs for nomination. Could better selections have been

Lack of harmony in the Democratic ranks will be apt to defeat their candidates for Mayor, Aldermen-at-Large, and others unless the breach is not probable. The Feeney and Reade factions have not forgotten the bitter if fight of last year; it will have its effect at the polls next month. This makes the present a good year for a Citizens like the present a good year for a Citizens and in doubt will. Mr. Preston will make a popular candidate for Mayor and strengthen the ticket. It is not yet settled whether Ald Brady will run for Mayor, Alderman at-Large, or Ward Alderman. It was reported a week ago that he would go for A.-at-L, but Mayor Feeney's go for A.-act., out shayor reeney serefusal to enter the contest has given the question a different look in the eyes of Ald. Brady, and he may reach up for the highest plum. With Reade and Brady in it the fight would prove an entertaining one.

The consolidation of the Med-I he consolidation of the Med-ford Citizem and Medford Mercury-has evolved one of the best newspapers in this part of Middlesex county. The massing of brains and capital, with a wide and prolific field to work in, and and profile field to work 10, and an intelligent community for patrons, the Citizen-Mercury is bound to flour-ish. We dislike the hypheneted name, but that is the only "out" about it. Long may it wave.

We honestly believe our new store to be the model fur store of Boston

Surely it ought to be, since it is the latest to be opened, and is arranged in opened, and sarranged in accordance with what we have learned in more than 25 years' experience. It is the largest fur sales-room in the city, and is admirably lighted.

Note these facts:

We buy our furs in large quantities for cash direct from trappers — hence a big saving in first cost and 179 Tremont St. a rare opportunity to select the specially fineskins which our trade demands. We manufacture practi-cally all the furs we sell, in clean workrooms, under our

Can a woman give to another woman the unawerving loyalty which an ideal friendship should exact? Will a woman be faithful to her friend no nerely while she is her friend, but after? If for any reason, jealousy or envy or the poison of suspicion part the two, will each be loyal to the past, envy or the poison of suspicion part the two, will each be loyal to the past, keep its secrets and respect its obligations? If ever two men who have once been friends wear out their friendship and perhaps exchange it for open enmity, they still respect the treat that has been broken. For the future, they will strike as hard as they are able, but in doing so they will not violate their old friendship, nor use the opportunities which it gives them for inflicting pain—but is this the case with women?

Does honor mean the same to a man as to a woman? These are some of the questions which Rafford Pyke asks in the article he contributes to the Notwell of the particular of the particular of the proposition of "What Women Like in Women".

A TREASURE OF INDIA

[Copyright, 1992, by C. B. Lewis.] The treasure hidden at the time of the Indan mutiny was only a year ago estimated at $100,000,000. In 1868 I was on a commission of three officers, headed by a Mr. Grant, estimated at $100,000,000.

In 1868 I was on a commission of three officers, headed by a Mr. Grant, to Inspect the temple at Bheeta, the government offering to rebuild it. Before reaching the place it was reported to us that spirits had taken possession of the ruins. Strange lights were seen at night, and the sound of stones being moved was heard. We paid no attention to these stories and camped near the desolated town.

The site was covered with shrubs and grass and vines, and here and there were groves of young trees. No tigers had been seen in that neighborhood for years, but the place looked like a paradise for panthers, wolves, hyenas and serpents. That evening, while we were settling down in our new quarters, a number of stones from unseen assailants were suddenly thrown with great force at one of the natives who had strayed beyond the limits of the eamp, hitting him on the head and knocking him insensible for several minutes. The missiles came from a thicket between us and the first ruins of the town, and after we had located the direction we fired a volley from our guns and put an end to the disturbance. The native servants were thrown into a state of great consternation, believing and arguing that our presence had offended the spirits keeping guard over the ruins, and but for Mr. Grant's threats the crowd would have bolted and left us.

"It think I see into this business," he explained to us after the servants had been quieted down. "These ruins have either been taken possession of by a band of robbers or there is a party here hunting for treasure. In either case our presence is undestrable, and that demonstration was to drive us away. We'll try to make it a bad job for them, whoever they are."

Soon after daylight one of the natives, who now had recovered a portion of his natural courage, inspected the shrubbery and found plenty of evidence that it had been occupied by men during the night. Some of the stones thrown at us were found to have been freshly broken from large blocks.

After breakfast the f and the rest of us following in Indian file. We had not advanced a hundred file. We had not advanced a hundred feet when we heard sobs and moans from both sides of us, and one would have sworn that a cozen women in distress were wandering about.

The sounds appeared quite close to us, yet we could not detect the presence of a human being. Suddenly as we continued to push ahead the thicket echoed such screams and shrieks that my knees gave out, and I had to clutch a limb to support me. I expected to be ridiculed for my exhibit, but the others came to a halt, with serious faces, and the engineer said:

five of us saw or thought we saw. What sort of jugglery it was I don't

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

This is a very important consideration in a woman's correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. It is a great satisfaction to feel that one woman can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, —a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and with a knowledge of woman's ills greater than that possessed by any other person.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

The reason Mrs. Pinkham is so amply qualified to give advice in cases of female ills is for the reason that over one hundred thousand cases come before her each year,—some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and day after day. Twenty years of constant success,—think of the knowledge thus gained. Surely, women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

As an illustration of the good coming from such advice we herewith publish two letters and portrait of Miss Hattie DeGreat, the reading of which should give every sick woman confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's ability to help them. This is only one of thousands of the same kind of letters which Mrs. Pinkham has on file.

"DEAR MES. PINKHAM: — I have read with interest your advice to others so much that I thought I would write to you, for I have been suffering for a long time. I have such bearing-down pains, and such shooting pains go through me. I have headache, backache, and feel tired. Menstruation is very painful, sometimes have to stop work and lie down.

My stomach bloats terribly, and I am troubled with whites. Hoping to hear from you MISS HATTIE DEGROAT, Succasuma, N. J."

"Dean Mrs. Pinkham: — I can hardly find words to thank you for your advice and wonderful Vegetable Compound. I was in a terrible state, every part of my body ached, was very nervous, had hysterical spells. I think I would have become insan had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Your letter told me just what to do, and your medicine cured me, and I cannot express my thanks."

March 8th, 1901. Miss Hattle DeGroat, Succasuma, N. J."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who suggests something and remember that the thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Cap of Coffee.

An ideal cup of coffee can, it is said, be made only in one way. The coffee must be of the best quality and must be roasted, ground immediately and used as quickly as possible. Connoisseurs in coffee assure us that it is out of the question to make this beverage absolutely perfect out of factory roasted coffee that has been allowed to stand in the open air any number of hours. In addition one might say that such a thing as a cup of good coffee from that which is purchased ready ground is quite an impossibility. The fine aroma of the berry evaporates in a verages 4 feet 11 inches and the left of the women two inches less. very short time.

The cavern was found the day the soldiers came, and in opening it this native had been hurt. His friends had abandoned him deliberately, but he bore them no grudge. On the contrary, he was gratified to know that the treasure had escaped the English. When asked as to its value, his eyes sparkled foyously, and he answered:

"Sahlb, there were millions! Over thirty men had each a heavy load and made ready to carry when I fainted away. It would have made a hundred Englishmen rich for life."

We found the cavern to be a room 8 feet long, 6 feet broad and 10 high. It had been swept clean. The native said it was nearly full of gold and silver and plate and jewelry. If so, the gross value was a tremendous big sum, and the fellows must have had to make two or three trips of it to carry everything away.

Effecting a Settlement.

"On one occasion," remarked a well known Methodist minister who had pretend to say, but it was jugglery of some sort, of course. Directly after the stone fell four or five large pieces of rock came crashing about our ears, and all beat a speedy retreat.

A messenger was dispatched at one to Bheeta, which is a military post, but it was three days before the soldiers came up. There were minery of them, and though we heard nothing further from the treasure hunters while waiting we felt sure they were still among the ruins. The troops entered from three different directions, having orders to shoot down anything they sighted, but the whole place was beaten up and only one native found. He was lying among the ruins of the temple with a broken leg. He was Shoigag from the fills, and after having been carried to camp and his lyuries attended to he talked freely.

The party had numbered fifty me and had been working for two weeks when we appeared. The leader had been told of the existence of a cavern under the ruins of the temple, and they had labored hard in their efforts to reach it. As we afterward saw for ourselves, they had moved at least a thousand tons of debris before opening the cavern. Their appliances were of the rudest sort, and everything had been accomplished by main strength. The cavern was found the day the soldiers came, and in spening it this an tive had been hurt. is also written in Josh, xxiv. works of the Lord that He did for Israel. But now we come to a different story. The book of Joshua tells of victory in the land. This book tells of sin, judgment, repentance and deliverance. Their sin was disobedience in making a league with the heathen rathcr than manifesting the true God, the God of Israel to them. The great sin of those who bear the name of Christ today is that instead of being separated unto Him and bonoring Him they are in league with the world lying in the wicked one (I John v, 19; Rom. xii, 1, 2). works of the Lord that He did for Iser them which knew not the Lord nor yet the works which He had done for Israel.

Joshua and all that generation having passed away from this present scene, their successors must have knewn of the Lord, who brought their fathers into the promised land, but they had no heart for Him. They did not like His ways, His righteousness. His dominion over them. Like their descendants long afterward, they acted as if their hearts said, "Speak unto us smooth things; prophesy deceits; cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us" (Isa, xxx, 10, 11). They are represented today by a vast multitude of churchgoers, many of them church members, who will not endure sound doctrine (II Tim. iv, 3), yet profess loyalty to Christ. They profess that they know the contraction of y to Christ. They profess that they ow God, yet in works they deny Baal and Ashtaroth.

The Lord God who brought them out of the land of Egypt, who led them through the Red sea on dry land, who overthrew the host of the Egyptians, their enemies, who fed them with manna all through the wilderness journey, who divided Jordan before them and gave them the good land with vineyards and olive vards and homes judges which delivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them.

We have just referred to the wonderful sinfulness of man and his rebellion against God, but the Bible is full of the more wonderful love of God, who loved us even when we were dead in sins, who commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us (Eph. ii, 4, 5; Rom. v, 8). That "God is Love" is the great foundation truth of Scripture, and, being such, He is not willing that any should perish (I John Iv, 8, 16; II Pet. iii, 9) Many a time He turned His anger away from this people, and, being full of compassion, He forgave Adam and Eve when in their sin they turned away from Him, and He has 17-19. They ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn way.

With many sinnings and repeatings they went from bad to worse. "They mocked the messengers of God and despised His words and misused His prophets until the wrath of the Lord arose against His people till there was no remedy" (II Chron. xxxvi, 16). Very long He bore with them, but finally He sent them into capityity for seventy years. After He restored them from Eabylon and they again became a people, though not as before. He sent to them His own Son, but they rejected Him and crueffed Him, and now they are scattered among all nations until He shall come again in His glory, and then they will receive Him and be a righteous nation from that time forth, they will blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit (Matt. xxili, 38, 39; Isa. xxv. 8; xxvii, 6; Ix. 21). How wonderful is the purpose of God and how sure of fulfillment (Bas. xiv. 24; Ps. xxxiii, 11). How much of heaven upon earth every child of God might have if only willing to walk humbly with Him! (Deut. xi. 21; Ps. Ixxxi, 13-16). We enter into rest when we cease from our own works.

WORKING IN THE DARK.

through the tunnels he had excavated with comparative safety.

Agricola, an author who wrote about the middle of the sixteenth century, has left an elaborate treatise on coal mining as it was practiced during the middle ages. From this we learn that the horse gin, which survives to the present day in some of the mining districts of Great Britain and gorthern Europe, was the engine chiefly employed both for lifting the coal and for getting rid of the water. This latter object was also sometimes effected by means of pumps turned by windmills or by tunnels driven with great labor to an outlet at a lower level.

Tombs of the Ancient Prophets. There exist in parts of Islam many tombs of the prophet Daniel. Of these one of the most celebrated is at Cairo. This fact need not astonish us. The Mussulmans admit without hesitation This fact need not astonish us. The Mussulmans admit without hesitation the duplication or even indefinite multiplication of the bodies of holy persons without their veneration for each of the remains being diminished in the least. It is worth noting that the nature of the honorary qualifications accorded to the same saint varies in different countries. Thus, for example, Daniel has at Cairo the name of Nebbi-Daniel—that is, they give him the title of prophet, as being at the same time that which suits him best and is the most honorable they can confer. In Algeria or Morocco—feudal countries—the title they give to saints is sidi, which signifies lord, which is also the title there of military and political chiefs. In central Asia they give to those canonized persons whom they respect most, as to the prophet Daniel, the title of khodja, which means in Arabic writer or lettered.

Making Marbie Out of Chalk.

In nature marble is made out of chalk by water which percolates through the chalky deposits, dissolves the chalk particle by parties and crystallizes it, mountain pressure solid-lifying it. It has been found that similar results may be accomplished by chemical means. First slices of chalk are dipped in a color bath, staining them with tints that will imitate any kind of marble known. For this purpose the same mineral stains are used as are employed in nature. For example, to produce counterfeit "verde antique" oxide of copper is utilized. In like manner green, pink, black and other colorings are obtained. Next the chalk slices go into another bath, by which they are hardened and crystallized, coming out to all intents and supposes real marble. lized, coming out to all intents and purposes real marble.

How the Navajo Squaw Prays as She Spins and Weaves.

It is a religion to make a Navajo blanket. Through the kinky, bristling twine of the warp are woven the hopes and aspirations of an immortal soul. In the warm colors are expressed the ardors of passionate hearts, the sand-storms they have faced, the cloudbursts under which their backs have bent, the smilting sunshine that has dried their wool; all the adverse and the good fortunes that have befallen are wrought into the intricate designs. The squaw prays as she pushes the wool card, and she prays as she twirts the distaff in her hand or rolls it on her thigh; she prays as she arranges the healds; she prays as she arranges the healds; she woof strands with her scrub oak bat-

When the stay in Paris drew to a close, Mrs. Burns heard with dismay that Mr. Hackett was accompanying them as far as London. And London was but Paris repeated. Mr. Hackett knew just what points of interest Ruth would enjoy and what she should avoid. He was more useful than Baedeker and infinitely better company.

But when the day for sailing from Southampton was set and Mrs. Burns learned that the ubiquitous Mr. Hacket thad taken passage on the same boat despair filled her soul. To the experienced chaperon no episode is more heavily charged with danger than an ocean voyage. At first she had been as rude as her gentle nature would permit, but the more chilly her reception the more assiduously would he devote himself to Ruth. If she occasionally relented and treated him with gracious tolerance, Mr. Hackett showed eager appreciation of her favor and waxed brilliant. She was at laine on the deck. b tolerance, Mr. Hackett showed eager appreciation of her favor and waxed brilliant.

She was thinking it all over tonight as she sat alone on the deck. In less than twenty-four hours, the captain had said, they would be in New York harbor. Then must come the accounting to Mrs. Cuscadden. No doubt at this very moment, under the cover of coon songs in the saloon, Mr. Hackett was whispering into the ears of Ruth those tender words which he should not be permitted to whisper.

The traitorous chaperon felt a sudden twitching at her heartstrings. Should she defy fate in the form of Mrs. Cuscadden? For herself it would mean but a broken friendship; for George Hackett it meant happiness for life. Strangely enough she did not seem to consider Ruth's happiness. She was thinking only of her girlhood, when Hackett's friendship had been such a very dear thing; when she would have given him-promised him—

"NO LICENSE."

It ought not to be necessary for the JOURNAL to remind the good people of this city that the question of license or no license for 1903 4 is to be voted on 26, at 8 o'clock. no license for 1903 4 is to be voted on at the next municipal election, or appeal to them to do their duty on that day. The experiences of the last six months of the dire effects of the liquor traffic in this community should induce every friend of temperance and good order to buckle on his armor for the contest and determine in his heart, and prove by his hand, that the sale of liquor shall no longer be legalized in liquor shall no longer be legalized in last Friday and got it.

Taps sewed on by hand, at Leathe's. liquor shall no longer be legalized in Warranted waterproof.

Voburn.

We think it safe to say that the poponents of license out-number its apporters; that the "No License" all the heart could wish. opponents of license out-number its supporters; that the "No License" ticket can be carried at the approaching election, if all lovers of sobriety and decency will do their duty; but are a fine set of young men.

and decency will do their duty; but will they?

The license forces are strong, alert, and active. Boston wholesale liquor dealers turnish them with plenty of money to work with. Their business dealers turnish them with plenty of money to work with. Their business success depends on the triumph of "Yes" at the polls. But in spite of all these odds against them, it is firmly believed that "No" will win the day, if temperance men will take pains to attend the election and vote as their consciences dictate when they get onsciences dictate when they get

We honestly believe our new store to be the model fur store of Boston.

Surely it ought to be, since it is the latest to be opened, and is arranged in accordance with what we have learned in more than 25 years' experience.

It is the largest fur salesroom in the city, and is admirably lighted.

Note these facts:

For His Sovereign's Sake.

The shah of Persia when in France suffered from a toothache, and so a dentist was summoned to remove the offending tooth. But, like less exaited mortals, the shah, when he found himself face to face with the dentist, discovered that his toothache had disappeared, and so absolutely refused to be operated on. However, his majesty declared that he did not wish the dentist to lose his time, and so commanded that a tooth should be extracted from each of his suit. He said this with his eyes fixed on the ground, and then, suddenly looking up, found, to his intense amusement, that all his ministers and staff had quietly slipped away except the grand vizier, whom he complimented upon being the only one faithful enough to undergo a little discomfort for his sovereign's sake. Then he dismissed the dentist with a present.

Followed Instructions Too Far.

Three women were having an experience meeting. The first told how her maid had locked her in the bathroom and fled from the house. The second told of a green cook who had boiled a watermelon. The third said:

"Well, my latest treasure has just landed and did not know how to wash windows, so I proceeded to explain matters to her. We live on the fifth story of an apartment house, and I showed her how to wash the outside by sitting on the sill and letting her feet. showed her how to wash the outside by sitting on the sill and letting her feet hang into the room. Imagine my amazement when I went back a few minutes later and found her washing the glass on the inside and sitting with her feet hanging out into the street."—New York Times.

The lapidary was skinning a pearl, according to the Philadelphia Record. He had on gloves of a very delicate sort of kid and the glasses that he wore had lenses of such great magnifying power that his eyes through them looked as big as saucers. "I wear gloves," he said, "because the hands perspire freely in this work, and perspirate freely in this work, and perspiration has often beer known to discolor pearls. This stone was injured by the accidental dropping on it of some acid. The disaster discolored it, you see. With this very delicate little tool I am removing the outer skin, and if I find that the acid has filtered through and discolored the inner skin also I may remove that as well. Ask Jones send one gross tomahawks; one gross butchers' knives. Going east; try make friends between tribes."

London was convulsed over the missionary's peculiar way of promoting friendship with the New Guinea cannibals, says a writer in the Rochester Post-Express. Chalmers had learned that no other two articles were so likely to do this. The knife and the tomahawk were popular for purposes of barter among people who would have had no use for copies of the "Encyclopedia Britannica" or cuts from a fashion magazine. The telegram was incongruous only to the ignorant.

The old people who used to live here?"

Seventh had written him almost a peremptory order to come in without an hour's delay, and Billy was the messenger deputed to carry it. He had a fast pony, was a good rider and had a cool head, and it was argued that he would be several hours ahead of danger. A light Winchester and a belt of cartridges were given him, and it was only when he was on his way that any one noticed the bugle slung to his back. He rode at a fast pace and reached Wharton's without adventure.

Billy had left the fort at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. It could be figured out that if Wharton refused to come the boy would be back at half past 12 at the latest. If Wharton accompanied him back, then it might be an hour later. It came I o'clock, and it came 2 and 3, and there was no sign of Billy. Then the colonel ordered out Company B for a scout. There were only seventy men, but it was believed they could take care of any force likely to be met with that far down the valley. The orders were to ride on until they found the boy, and the troop was no sooner clear of the stockade than the horses were put to the gallop. They hoped to met Billy before the crest of Snake kill was reached, but when a halt was made on the summit to breathe the horses and the troopers looked down upon Wharton's ranch, still three miles away, a dozen men cried out in chorus; "Look! Look! The redskins have jumped the ranch and are burning the house."

that sheds and stacks only had been fired and that the house itself was still intact. But as the soldiers used their naked eyes and the officers their glasses to locate the redskins the sounds of rifle shots came floating up to them, followed by the notes of a bugie. Bugler Billy was sounding "Boots and saddles!" as a call for aid.

Company B had brought along a supernumerary bugler. The captain nodded to him. He dismounted, climbed ded to him. He dismounted, climbed

The Conductor's Baton.

According to the investigations of a Frenchman the credit of inventing the conductor's baton belongs to Lully, the composer, who eventually had cause to regret his invention. Before he adopted the baton conductors were in the habit of pounding on the floor with their feet or clapping their hands to mark the time. Lully found it wearisome to keep his foot constantly in motion and so used a stick to strike the floor and beat time. He used a pole six feet long. One day he brought down the pole with such force that it struck his foot and made a deep wound. He paid no attention to the matter. The wound grew worse and ultimately caused his death.

After his time conductors tried more

ELWYN G. PRESTON.

It is everywhere admitted that Mr. Elwyn G. Preston, if elected, will make a model Mayor of this city. It is an indisputable fact. He has the ability, the honesty, and the firmness, needed for a first lass Executive Officer, and by that token there ought not to be the least doubt of his election by a large majority.

Mr. Preston has discharged the duties of every official position held by him perfectly. As City Auditor his work was without flaw or blemish. But it is in his administration of the affairs of the Woburn Water Department that his rare executive ability comes more plainly to view and is better appreciated by the public. His record as Water Commissioner of the Board of Public Works is a splendid one. The saving he has effected in the expenditures of that Department, and at the same time given the public all that has been needed, has been remarkable, and he is entitled to the credit for the and he is entitled to the credit for the

The commercial interests of Boston are largely in its hands, and Mr. Preston is prominent in the execution of measures to promote them. When Congress is in session his duties frequently call him to Washington, especially when River and Harbor appropriation bills are on the docket.

The simple truth is, Mr. Preston is a clear headed business man, a man of affairs, and it may be set down for a certainty that in him the city will have a Mayor who will do it honor, and of whom the people will have reason to be proud.

AN UNCHANGED BILL.

The Newfoundland Flahermen Kill Hundreds For Saiting.

Newfoundland is probably the only country in the world where venison, salted or fresh, is a staple article of diet for the masses.

The coast folk make their plans with method and deliberation.

From the harbors where they reside they go in their boats to the rivers and fords which strike into the interior. When navigation is no longer possible, they debark and continue on foot to the deer country. They carry barrels filled with sait and sometimes go in large companies. When the renderavous is reached, they camp. They ambush themselves along a promising "lead" or deer track, armed with long six foot muzzle loading sealing guns, which they charge with about "eight fingers" of coarse gunpowder and "slugs" of lead, fragments of from or bits of rusty fire point blank into a herd of caribou as it pesses and, being usually good shots, contrive to kill almost anything The Clothing Merchant Was Too Much For the College Professor,

Jane was a patient in one of the large public hospitals. She boasted a cough which was more than suspected to be a "fake" cough rather than bronchial or pulmonary.

The kindly young physician in charge of the ward allowed her some harmless remedies. One day he said to her:

"Ah, Jane, I fear you are a bad case of hypochrondria!"

"Is that it, docther?" said Jane, much impressed.

The next morning there she was again, asking for her little dose.

* PAPTAIN FYFE OF THE SIXTH

When the Indians of the United States begin the ghost dance, the army prepares for an outbreak. In India when a new prophet comes down from the Himalaya mountains and begins to stir up the people orders are issued to stir up the people orders are issued to suppress him at once. He is either cap-tured by the military and banished from the province or arrested by the civil authorities and immured in a dun-geon until forgotten. The English in India are arbitrary and autocratic. They realize that they are living over a volcano which may spout fame and death any hour. They move quickly and strike hard.

The coming of a prophet means popular excitement, plots and conspiracies, rekindling of the flames of hatred, danrekindling of the flames of hatred, danger to the English rule. Strong hands must be laid on the holy man at once.
Perhaps there will be resistance, and a score of natives will be killed, and the resistance may even grow into an incipient rebellion, but the English put it down, bury the dead and give out nothing for publication. To rule India without gloves of steel would be to lose her in a year.

Without gloves of alceled to the book ber in a year.

When the Prophet Rajmahal came down to the province of Behar from his mountain retreat, in which he claimed to have slept and dreamed for the book of the behavior of the behavior of the base o twenty years, intense excitement followed in his track. He headed straight lowed in his track. He headed straight for Moorshedabad, on the Ganges, to visit the ruins of an ancient temple and the tombs of his long dead ancestors, but he was headed off sixty miles to the north of that place. A lieutenant in the Sixth rifles had been detailed with half the troop on this special duty. While it is true that most of the so-called prophets and holy men wandering about India are fakirs of the worst sort, who stir up excitement and sedition for the money there is in it, it is also true that a few of them are earnest and conscientious and should be dealt with harship only after argument has been exhausted. The lienment has been exhausted. The lieu-tenant found the Prophet Rajmahal to tenant found the Prophet Rajmahal to be a venerable and distinguished looking man. His age must have been eighty years or more, and yet he was sturdy and upright and had a voice like a clarion. He was a fluent speaker, full of argument, reason and appeal, and he was lighting a flame of zeal in every village he passed through. He utterly refused any cash contributions, lived on what the dogs would hardly eat and addressed the people without fear of consequences. He had dreamed of emancipation and a new ruler. It was sedition straight from the shoulder, and in less than a mouth he could set the whole province month he could set the whole province

When the lieutenant came face to When the lieutenant came face to face with the prophet, he resolved to try reason and argument. The officer could but yield respect and did not desire to see him dragged around the country, disgraced and degraded. Rajmahal was for defiance at first, and he had enough adherents in his train to have eaten the troops ten times over, but after an interview lasting for hours he recognized the force of English logic and announced that he would return to his mountain

The prophet was as good as his word, but his return was slow. This was caused solely by the crowds blocking his way and exhorting him to defy the government. He had not yet made fifty miles on the backward track when Captain Fyfe came on with the rest of the troop. The lieuteant was relieved from duty under a cloud, and orders were issued to push the old man out of the province at the point of the saber. Captain Fyfe overtook him, pronounced him a fakir, an impostor and a charlatan, and, wishing to make the degradation complete, pulled him by the beard and spat on his raiment.

This scene took place in the open air in sight of 3,000 people and the full in surface. The form of the province at the point of 3,000 people and the full in sight of 3, forward with a stick to drive him away, but the idler protested, weeping, and after speaking in a strange jargon he forced out the words:

"Take me—take me to the colonel!"

Ambling and clucking and chattering, he was passed to the colonel. Now and then a native came in with reports worth heeding, and this "thing" was supposed to be the bearer of some such news. Standing before the colonel, he stuttered and glageld like a fool. What few words he did utter no one could understand. The colonel lost patience and spoke to him sharply, and the "thing" groveled at his fest.

Ties in Maple Wood.

Nobody seems to know what cause it is which produces those delicate and beautiful lines in maple known as birdseye. Some people think they branches which shoot out over the trunk of the tree as soon as a clearing is made around it. Expert timbermen say that is not the case. The only way to tell a birdseye maple tree is to cut it. There are no outward signs by which one can judge. The Railroad Gazette tells a story of the late George.

Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequaled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Thiss Hannah F. Mershon, Collings.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

wood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me." How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpe.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."

—Miss Fannie Kung, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900.)

healthy condition, the medical gentle man hears a pleasant, breezy sound, soft in tone, as you draw in the breath and expel it. Should the instrument convey to his var a gurgling or bubling sound he makes a mental note of the fact that you are in what is known as the moist stage of bronehitis. In the dry stage of the same complaint the sound is a whistling, wheezy one. One of the signs of pneumonia is the crackling note that comes through the stethoscope. It is not unlike the sound that can be heard when your finger and thumb have touched a sticky substance and you first place them together and then part them, holding them close to your ear.

Doctors occasionally hear a dripping sound, and that indicates that air and water have got into some part of the chest where they have no right to be. Blow across a bottle, and you will produce a sound which is actually to be heard in your chest. It is caused in the same way—that is, by air passing over a cavity.

0077007700770077007700 Old Gib Ezell went swinging and stumping upon his crutches down the street and up the steps of his store. It was the biggest store in town, though not the smartest. Joe Beenam, who had opened up the spring before, just across the street, was running old Gib hard in groceries and hardware and leaving him out of sight when it came to knickknacks or dry goods pure and A man who half knew looked after old Gib, then across at the sign of his young rival and murmured half to himself, "What a pity!" Another man who knew also looked, listened to the exclamation and answered it, sticking out his chin as he spoke, "Better say, "What a shame!"

"What's a shame, doc?" a third said, coming up behind them. Doctor Waters smiled half grimly. "I'm not quite sure—it seems to be the hitch in the course of a true love," he answered.

Lew Bayne, the man who had spoken first, shook his head energetically. "I meant that poor old fellow's legs," he said. "I suppose, doc, it's certain he'll said. "I suppose, doc, it's certain he'll said. "I suppose, doc, it's certain he'll never walk again."

"Now you've got me," the doctor protested. "I'd risk my professional reputation that fall he got on the sleety pavement did no worse harm to his shrunken shanks than bark them up pretty generally. There were bruises, of course, and on the shoulder and side as well. I told him he'd be out and about in plenty time for the Christmas trade, but from the first he stood me up and down that he'd never take another steady step, and so far, I'm other steady step, and so far, I'm bound to admit, he was right. There's nothing on earth the matter with his legs, nothing at least that I or the othlegs, nothing at least that I or the other doctors can see. Against that there is the fact that the minute he tries to stand on them they do the joint rule act—double under him as though they hadu't strength to bear up a spider. The trouble must lie in the nerves. If that's what you meant, I agree with you that it's a pity. I thought you had reference to the trick he's played on Joe Beenam."

"What is it?" asked Merton, the

"What is it?" asked Merton, the third of the group. "You know I've been away six months! Tell me all about it."

"Not much to tell," Dr. Waters said.
"You know Florrie Ezell"—
"I ought to, considering she sent me away," Merton broke in ruefully.
"You don't mean Joe is gone on her like the rest of us? I thought"— "You've hit it." the doctor said. "Joe prevailing infection, but a man never knows what's coming to him until it hits him square in the face."

"Lord! To think of Joe, the 'bombproof,' we called him," Mertonchuckled.

INTELLIGENCE OFFICE.

Persons wanting Help or Situations, or Nursescal be furnished with the best by calling on Mrs. Joe could have both his daughter and his store. You know be didn't take overkindly to competition anyway"—
"That he didn't! Why, he even wrote to our credit man to keep a peeled eye on Joe," Merton interrupted.

his daughter is just as good a woman as ever was made."

"About Joe, now?" Merton queried.
Dr. Waters frowned.

"Joe courted Florrie with such a rush that in a week they were engaged. Then he went right in to old Gib and had it out with him—told him all about himself and his business, in and out, up and down—but the substance of it was he wanted Florrie for his wife.

if only he could get h. And then the old crocodile pretended to cry; said Florie was all he had to live for; he heped Joe wouldn't press him for an answer then, nor, indeed, talk of an engagement until he was either dead or himself again. You know how soft hearted old Joe is, and how he hangs on to his word once he passes it. Of course he promised, never mistrusting the old wretch was playing him. So there you are! Florie's worrying and losing color because Joe only speaks when they pass by, but don't come to the house. Joe's about desperate, and old Gib is fattening and getting ten years younger—on spite and crutches. What the end is to be nobody can guess."

"Can old Gib be shamming?" Merton asked. Dr. Waters shook his head. "I thought so at first," he said. "But if he is it beats anything in the books. There's certainly nothing wrong with his legs, except that they're a bit flabby. It's equally as cartain he can't walk on them. I think sometimes he has hypnotized himself. If it was just deceit and what I call cussedness, I would have been able before this to take him off his guard."

"Well, I can at least go over and condole with Joe," Merton said, stepping across the street. "And maybe sympathy will be worth an order," he called back over his shoulder as he struck the store steps. If only he could get it. And then the send two of them off to dinner when the door opened wide, and Merton came through, with Joe Beenam in his wake and Dr. Waters and Lew Bayne marching solemnly behind. Joés face was white, his eyes brilliant, his figure tense in every line. Indeed he looked desperate, and his voice rang ha.d as he said, stopping short three feet away:

he said, stopping short three feet away:

"Mr. Ezell, I have come to ask you, here in the presence of these witnesses, to release me from my promise. You know well how it was given-with a total misapprehension of the truth."

"You mean you want to take my daughter, as well as my trade, and leave me, a cripple, to starve!" old Gib roured.

roared.

Joe set his teeth. "I mean nothing of the sort!" he said. "Give me your daughter, and our home shall be yours. I will serve and care for you as I would for my own father".—

"You won't get the chance," old Gib sneered. Joe half turned to his friends and whispered sepulchrally: "Go a way! Quick!"

"Golug to murder me, hev?" old Gib. roared.

"Going to murder me, hey?" old Gib sniffed.

Joe stood very straight. The others had slunk toward the door, with the awed clerks huddling after. They

"It is not murder! I shall give my life to free Florrie from your intolera-ble tyranny!"

Then they saw him fling wide the stove door and dash into it what seemed like several pounds of gunpowder.

Old Gib saw it too. With one wild, whooping yell he leaped from his chair regardless of crutches, of everything but flight, rushed madly for the door, darted through it and did not pause until he came panting and trembling to his own gate. As he clung there the others overtook him, as breathless as himself betwist running and laughing. Dr. Waters made a low bow. "If had thought three pounds of black sand would be so effectual, I would have had you well long ago." he said.

Merton dragged Joe forward. "If you want to kick anybody, kick me," he said to old Gib. "I put this lad," patting Joe's shoulder, "up to playing you that trick."

"Come to my office tomorrow and I will have a deed ready to be signed also a receipt for the stock. Mudgative labour a last on the less took till the lest of January, when ours goes on the market, and then only at the rate of a thousand shares day."

"Jes' so."

The promoter gave the supposed of the curious parting glance, as though he wondered at his motive for the next morning at 10 o'clock, Silan had been waiting for him three hours. The papers were ready. Old Gib saw it too. With one wild, "Humph! I knew he didn't have the brains for it himself," old Gib snorted.

But, though he had found his legs, he was none the less old Gib. The fact was proved by his letting Joe and Flortic marry almost out of band and Florrie marry almost out of band and presenting them with both his store and his blessing.

Such as were admitted had to dress in conformity with the edict of the tyrants, no gentleman being allowed to appear at the assemblies except in knee breeches, white cravat and crush hat. On one occasion the Duke of Wellington was about to ascend the stairs to the ballroom dressed in black trousers when the guardian of the establishment stepped forward and said, "Your grace cannot be admitted in trousers," whereupon be admitted in trousers," wherever the duke, who had a great respect quietly walked away.-New York Press.

During the last years of his life, as his strength permitted, he watched over his paper as zealously as in his younger days, and it was his custom to scan the columns of certain favorite exchanges and clip from them extensively, marking them on the margins, "J. M.—Must," meaning that the extracts must go in. It was one of his great griefs that there was not always room for all of them, even when columns of live editoral matter had been crowded out, as they were sometimes to make room for them.

One night he went up to the room of the night editor with a bundle of clippings in his hand.

It must be that the friends of sobriety and good order realize the importance of the question, the importance of securing a right decision of it at the polls. If doubts concerning it have existed in the minds of some of them, the object lessons they have had presented to them on our streets since May 1, 1902, should settle the contest in favor of 'No License.''

We believe the temperance party can carry the day on the 9th if they will only say the word. Why not say it, then, and work accordingly? The city would be a great deal better off for their success. All the people in it would be better off. Woburn will never cut an attractive figure in the community of towns and cities in this part is simply a call to duty; it is counsel and advice, based on Scripture, in the interest of higher and better living. Dr. Norton would have faithful work

THE CITY ELECTION.

It takes place next Tuesday, Dec. 9. Appearances indicate a large vote, the figure generally mentioned being 2700. The total registry is 3197, so that it looks as though the estimated poll had been set a little too high. About 2600 would appear to come nearer the mark. Still, there are some things to be taken into account when figuring on the result. Preston and Feeney are old campaigners. They have been there before, and are great hustlers. Then again, the liquor men and friends of license are leaving no stone unturned to carry the election. They have a plenty of money and a host of workers.

of license are leaving no stone unturned to carry the election. They have a plenty of money and a host of workers. Every one of their men who can be got there will be at the polls. In addition to these, there are reasons personal to some of the candidates that may have a tendency to swell the total.

The weather, however, will have to be reckoned with; likewise the sick, the absent, and the don't-care a-darus. Deduct these, and it is doubtful if the vote exceeds 2600.

The Value of Precaution.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the great value of precautionary measures for the prevention of the development of disease. So much depends on individual effort for this important work that the use of an article of unquestioned merit and standing for daily use in the household should be greatly supported that it is more economical for daily houseleaning and disinfecting than soaps, powders or cheap deoderants. The latter class is iminical to health, covering up one smell by the generation of another and allowing disease germs of another and allowing disease germs of develope under cover of their predominating odor.

An Alligator's Nest.

Alligators' nests resemble haycocks more than anything else to which they can be compared. They average about four feet in height and five feet in diameter and are constructed of grasses and herbage. First the mother gator deposits one layer of eggs on a mortar-like floor, and, having covered this with a stratum of mud and herbage about eight inches thick, lays another set of eggs upon that, and so on to the top, there being commonly from 100 to 200 eggs in a nest. With their tails the parents then beat down the tail grass and weeds to prevent the approach of unseen enemies. The female watches ther eggs until they are hatched by the heat of the sun and then takes her brood under her own care, defending them and providing for their subsistence.

Clever Gentleman.

On this particular occasion she landed in New York from a trip to Philadelphia about So'clock in the evening.

As, sut case in hand, she stepped lightly from a Twenty-third street car at Broadway, two gentlemen—tail and distinguished looking in full dress, opera hats, etc.—crossed the tracks at the rear of the car and met her face to face.

"Carry your grip, mum," impudently remarked one of them, with all the airs of a "smartle" who thinks he has done something clever.

Quick as a flash into the white gloved hand went the travel solled grip, and with a "To the next corner" the "clever gentleman" found himself suddenly transformed into a porter, with a trim little miss walking along beside him in a very matter of fact way.

with a trim little miss walking along beside him in a very matter of fact way.

Looking as if he wanted to treat the matter as a loke and didn't know exactly how, he religiously carried the grip to the corner. What else could the poor man do?

Relieving him finally of his burden, the girl innocently slipped a dime into the elegantly gloved hand (she was used to having porters assist her) and prepared to board a car. Not the slightest suggestion of a smile crossed her pretty features.

As the whiz of the car finally drowned the uproarious laughter and the "That's one on you" of the victim's companion a merry twinkle might have been seen in a pair of blue eyes on a Columbus avenue car bound Harlemward.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE CANNIBAL TREE.

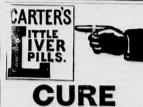

Forests of Australia.

One of the most wonderful forest trees in the world is the "cannibal tree" of Australia, which grows up in the shape of a huge pineapple and seldom attains a height of more than eleven feet. It has a series of broad, beardlike heaves growing is. eleven feet. It has a series of broad, boardlike leaves, growing in a fringe at the apex, which reminds one of a gigantic Central American agave. When standing erect, these broad, thick leaves hide a curious looking arrangement, which appears to perform the same functions as those of the pistils in flowers. Naturally these boardlike leaves, which are from ten to twelve feet long in the smaller specimens and from fifteen to twenty in the larger, hang to the ground and are strong enough to bear a man's weight.

"MAD ANTHONY" WAYNE.

He Was the Sanest, Coolest Soldier In Washington's Army.

Be Was the Sanest, Golest Soldier In Washington's Army.

John R. Spears in Harper's demonstrates that General Wayne, commonly known as "Mad Anthony," was in reality the sanest, coolest soldier in Washington's army.

"They called the hero of Stony Point and the Maumee rapids Mad Anthony Wayne," says Mr. Spears. "The title was originated by an Irish soldier who had been confined in the guardhouse at the order of the general, and it was taken up by the people because of the wild enthusiasm and determination with which Wayne led his men when the supreme moment of battle came, But observe that when the war of the Revolution impended he 'ransacked history' for accounts of battles that he might learn military thetics, and he gave his days to the training of his men in spite of his wound, but in preparing for the battle he appealed to the prelied of his men by parading them 'clean shaved and with hair well powdered,' while the prelaid plans include ed even the slaughter of the dogs, that no yelp should betray the approach of the assaulting host. When in Virginia, he charged the hosts of Cornwallis with only 500 men to back him; when in Ohlo, where the honor of the nation and the integrity of its territory were committed to his care, he took a legion of 'boys and miscreants' gathered from the slums and trained them until their skill with the musket equaled, if it did not surpass, that of the most noted backwoods Indian flighters.

"Mad Anthony Wayne as a leader in battle was unsurpassed, but it should also be remembered that his record as a drill master is unequaled."

Eton college was founded in 1440. Next to Winchester, it is the oldest of surpass, that of the most noted backwoods Indian flighters.

Woman's Sense of Humor. It certainly seems that in much of the humor of women there is a trait closely allied to the retort courteous, as vanche and with gentle satire, said, "I am sorry for man; just at that awk ward age between the ape and the an gel." Another woman it was who re marked after reading the Carlyle let marked after reading the Carlyle letters, "Yes, it is true; Mrs. Carlyle was a martyr, but she wasn't a good martyr, or we'd never have heard of it." Better known is the anecdote of the learned and fastidious New England woman who, being in need of a pin, was asked by a friend, who was somewhat in awe of her, what kind of pin she wanted and hit off the situation wittily with her indignant reply, "The common white pin of North America." In all these instances one may discern something of "the look downward." It would be interesting to know if this is characteristic of the humor of the sex.—Century.

FLIGHT OF THE SNIPE.

The flight of the snipe is swift, vigorous and usually for the first few yards erratic. The bird gets under way smartly, and as a usual thing goes boring up wind in a style rather suggestive of a feathered corkscrew. A series of electrical zigzags get him to top speed, whereupon his progress steadies a bit and he darts away in steadies a bit and he darts away in something more like a straight line. As a general rule a flushed bird springs a few feet into the air, hangs for the fraction of a second, then begins to twist and dodge as though the Old Boy was at his tail. It would be very in-teresting could we discover the original cause of the dodging. Possibly some cause of the dodging. Possibly some ancient foe, now long extinct, was best baffled by that mode of flight, for there usually is some such explanation for peculiar actions by wild things. Because the flight happens to be puzzling to a gunner is no guarantee that the bird dodges for that purpose—such an explanantion would imply a deal more intelligence than the entire tribe of snipe are possessed of. Snipe, of course, dodged on the wing long prior to the appearance of firearms, and it is extremely unlikely that the erratic flight has anything in the nature of protective tactics against the devices of human foes.—Edwyn Sandys in Outing.

A Plea For Leisure.

Individuals will rather helplessly reply to a plea for leisure by saying:

"What are we going to do? Competitors 'hustle' and we must do the same or starve." Some will urge that the American temperament demands constant occupation, that "hustling" is our national trait. Well, I have no desire to insist that we go back to stagecoach days. But all of us have pelpenty of opportunity to tone down a plenty of opportunity to tone down a little. And why not try it? A national trait may be dangerous as well as useful—may need control. If average individual would make n leisurely use of his leisure there would not be nearly as many cases of nervot prostration as there are now. Put of the brakes a bit. Take things a little easier when you can. I know people who are never content unless they are "doing" something. Such abnormal desire for activity is not natural; it is an unnatural craving. It will be well for us not to be so eager to gratify it.—Great Round World.

A "Man of Steady Habits."

It was a very angry man who met an acquaintance on the street the other day. "I thought you told me that D. was a man of steady habits," were his first words following the usual salutation. "I said I required a man of absolutely steady habits, and you were very positive in your assurance that the man in question was such a one." "Well, has he proved otherwise?" "Why, man, he is drunk all of the time; in fact, I do not think he has drawn a sober breath since he, has been with me."

"Then what are you jumping on me for? Your own statement bears out just what I told you about him. I have known D. for the past ten months, and I know that he has been drunk distributed the statement of the

to appear on a lady's cheek by means of a specially designed knife with a very small and very sharp blade, a daintily tiny, keen edged, silvered scoop and a very fine needle.

A small, straight incision is first made in the flesh. The little scoop is then used to remove a small portion of the underlying fat, while the sewing together with the needle the edges of the cut completes the operation. In a day or two the stitches are taken out, within a week the wound being usually entirely healed, leaving the becoming little depression in the surface of the skin that is called a dimple.

It is not often that a woman desires the removal of a natural dimple, but occasionally a man who considers the mark to be a badge of effeminecy desires to get rid of it. Instead of removing the superfluous fat from beeath the surface a small portion of the skin is cut away. The edges of the dimple are drawn together with stitches, the incision heals and the depression disappears.

Fighting Lizards.

The ring necked lizard of the Arizona deserts is not a mere devourer of weak lings. He is always ready to fight, whether he is challenged by another or cornered by a man. whether he is challenged by another or cornered by a man. When brought to bay in some hole, he opens his jaws and dashes bravely out, snapping at everything which opposes him, and so fierce and sudden is his rush that it is impossible to face it without flinching. By holding two of these lizards loosely by the small of the back and allowing their heads to clash as they struggle to escape, one may be able to induce combats such as must occur every day in the desperate lizard world.

Forgetting that they were captives, they would seize upon each other and yent their thwarted rage to the utmost in a fight which, but for timely interference, would doubtless lead to the death of one or the other. Democrats were victorious, and so were the liquor dealers and lovers. The Republicans and temperance people were disappointed and dismayed.

Mayor Feeney is to be his own successor on Jan. 1, 1903. His plurality was 350, just the figure he marked on the inside of the cellar door two weeks before election. Why not? The Democratic majority in this city is nearly 600. That tells the story.

The City Election.

The City Election.

The returns given below show that the JOURNAL underestimated the total vote of Woburn on Dec. 9, by almost 150. Its forecast placed the figure at 2600, while the vote cast was 2740. For two weeks before the election Mayor Feeney had insisted that his plurality over Preston would be from 300 to 400, probably about 350. That was exactly what he got. The fact is, the Democrats have about 500 majority in this city; they were practically. the Democrats have about 500 majority in this city; they were practically united; how, then, could Preston's election have been reasonably expected? He could hope for no considerable number of Democratic votes; there was no "landslide" in the air; Feenee's "fences" were in the best of repair. The Republican ticket for Aldermen-at-Large handicapped him, and some other matters lessened his vote.

The entire Democratic ticket for Aldermen-at-Large was elected. It is a good one.

The Mohammedans have a fable which they repeat to illustrate the certainty of fate. The Philadelphia Times quotes it as having been told by Mr Robert Barr, the celebrated novelist.

a brilliant court fete was then in progress. Upon being asked his reason for such haste the vizier replied:
"Because I just saw the angel of death yonder in the crowd. He looked at me so earnestly that I know he has come for me. I wish to escape him."
"Go! Go at once!" said the suitan, who then beckened to the angel and asked why the latter had looked so earnestly at the vizier.
"I was wondering," replied the angel of death, "why he was here, for I have orders to kill him in Smyrna."

Nelson, like all the greatest com-munders on sea or land, made his mis-takes and his failures, but there is only one instance on record of his having been actually defeated in a direct attack. When Tissot Was Satisfied.

An interesting story is toid of Jacques Tissot, the great French painter. While in England he painted a beautiful religious picture and, meeting a countrywoman, asked her opinion of his work. "It's a chef d'œuvre," she replied, giving a remarkably just and detailed appreciation of the various merits of the painting.

"Are you satisfied?" asked a friend. Tissot answered in the negative. He entirely repainted his picture, working night and day.

When finished, he sent again for his fair critic, who pronounced it admirable and remained silently admiring it with smiling criticism. When Tissot Was Satisfied.

There were hirty men in the White seen on the streets of Manila is a Filipin of meral. If the deceased was wealthy and had hosts of friends, the funeral will be headed by a band playing selections from comic operas. The body of the deceased follows in a hearse covered with black cloth arranged in a grewsome design and drawn by six black ponies, each bedecked with headgear of long black feathers. The hearse will be followed by men on foot wearing knickerbockers and cocked hats, and after them follow innumerable vehicles of every description. If the body is to be interred, the gravediggers will precede the band, with their tools over their shoulders.

Most Filipino funerals, however, are more pathetic. The father of a few weeks old baby will trot out to the cemetery entirely alone, with the little white coffin balanced well on his head, and if a man had not the price of a vehicle his remains will be carried out on bamboo poles by four Chinamen, and the coffin will be one that has seen service before.

About Volcanoes.

Few persons have any idea of the prodigious quantity of lava and hot ashes which a volcano in a state of eruption can vomit in a few hours.

The matter which was discharged in 1669 from Mount Etna and which threatened to overwhelm Catania forms a mass the extent of which has been estimated as being not less than 1,000,000,000 cubic yards.

From the immense crater of Kilauea, in Hawaii, there was vomited in 1840 during a single eruption a mass of lava equivalent to fifty times the volume of earth which it was necessary to remove in order to form the Suez canal.

In 1873 the Skaptar-Jokull, one of the most redoubtable volcanoes in Iceland, sent forth two rivers of fire, one of which ran along a valley for eighty miles, its depth along the entire distance being thirty yards. Finally, it is estimated that from the mass of stones and ashes which were discharged in 1883 from Krakatoa could be formed a

Whereas the mound builders were not full fledged Bohemians and far from "smart," they still had ideals and illusions, also a chaperon, who was the mother of one of them. They had taken the ground floor apartment because the rent was lower.

When Dal and his chum and "the other one" spent an evening either separately or collectively with the mound builders, they came away feeling decidedly jolly, almost boyishly so, on good terms with themselves and the rest of the world.

"A call on the builders leaves a good, wholesome taste in a fellow's mouth." "the other one" had remarked one night.

"The little girl's mother's a brick," Dal chimed in. "She makes one feel like the time when the treetops 'seemed close against the sky.'"

Dallas Sinclair had dropped in this afternoon just for a word with Vivacia, she of the cliff dwellers, and had stepped back of the screen to examine some of her latest sketches. Vivacia had paused in the next room to slip on a pretty house gown. Somehows he always liked to look her best when Dal came.

"Uncross your legs," said a doctor.
"Oh, no," said his son. "What's the use of being so polite all the time?"
"My boy," the father answered, "it is not on account of a mere rule of etiquette that I tell you to uncross your legs, but it is because leg crossing is an injurious thing, a thing as baleful to the health as kissing or as microbes.
"When you cross your legs, you fit the knee cap of the upper limb into the cavity under the knee of the lower one. In the cavity that you thus compress there are the two important exterior and interior popliteal nerves and a number of glands and blood vessels.

Memory Verses, 7-10-Golden Text, I Sam. III, 9-Commentary Prepared [Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association

See the same statement with an ad-See the same statement with an addition in chapter ii, 18, and note that children may minister to the Lord, and no priest is called to anything greater of the control of t (II Chron. xxix, 11), but every believer (II Gron. xxix, 11), but every believer, being a priest (I Pet. li, 9), is expected to stand before the Lord, to serve Him. to minister unto Him and offer seriebee. It is said that the word of the Lord was precious (or rare, R. V., margin) in those days. There was no frequent vision, and yet here is a most important message given to a little child.

Then he ran to Ell thinking that Eli had called him, and Ell told him to lie down again, not thinking that possibly the Lord had spoken. Ell was not only physically infirm, but he was out of fellowship with God in some mensure because of the infiguity that was in his household. This should lead us to consider most prayerfully if there is anything in our hearts or homes that may

And for the second time Eli told him to lie down and did not seem to think that the Lord had perhaps called him. How often has the Lord called us and we did not know or recognize His voice! By His word, by His Spirit, who we did not know or recognize His werd, sentences He seeks to us truct us and guide us, but we are so dull of hearing, so preoccupied, so full of earthly things or the large and unruly concourse of people "silence would instantly prevail." A small bone found in the trid time, and he arose and went to be liand said, Here am I, for thou didst call me, and Ell perceived that the Lord acided the child.

What a blessed son! What unwearied obedience! How many of us answered the first time the Lord called us? What might have been our condition today if the had not so patiently and persistently called us again and again! How but how awful the possibility of verses 12 to 31. See in this boy the faithful training of the mother who had suffered so much in her own home and had also been misunderstood and misjudged by Israel's high priest (i. 6.8, 14, 15), but had learned to know God better than many. Yet it would seem that Samuel had not been taught that the Lord in heaven sometimes spoke to people on earth, or if he had been told of God's messages to Adam, Abraham, is and, Jacob, Moses and others he seems not to have been taught that the Lord might do so again.

2, 10, And the Lord came and stood and history that the condition of God's messages to Adam, Abraham, is and, Jacob, Moses and others he seems not to have been taught that the Lord might do so again.

or as it is in the margin, "He frowned not upon them." The law about rehel lious sons is found in Deut, xxi, 18-21, and God had not failed to give Eli due warning and had told him plainly that in not restraining his sons he was honoring them above God (chapter ii, 27-29). It means a great deal to be on the Lord's side, for it may mean that we must take a very decided stand against those who are very dear to us, not against them, but against their evil ways, which if they prefer rather than the right ways of God and of those who love them it must mean separation from them in some sense. We cannot have fellowship with God and with the world lying in the wicked one (I John ii and Jas. iv, 4). It seems to some who profess to believe God and hold and teach His truth a small matter to have fellowship with others who teach that much of the Bible is not reliable and lowship with others who teach that much of the Bible is not reliable and the Lord Jesus is not God, but God much of the Bible is not reliable and the Lord Jesus is not God. but God sees it and will requite, though He bear long with it. We may wonder if either Ell or Samuel slept much more that night, but we are told that in the morning when Ell asked Samuel what the Lord had said Samuel told him every whit and hid nothing from him (verse 28). It seems to me that the last three verses of the chapter are intended to show us how the Lord honors those who are faithful to Him, according to chapter il. 30. We note also that the Lord continued to show us how the Lord continued to reveal Himself to Samuel and all Israel knew that Samuel was a faithful prophet of the Lord (verse 20, margin). Ell's acknowledgment of his Just desert is worthy of special attention. "It is the Lord. Let Him do what seemeth Him good" (verse 29, margin). Ell's acknowledgment of his Just desert is worthy of special attention." It is the Lord. Let Him do what seemeth Him good "(verse 28). Compare Job 1, 21; Ps. xxxxi, 0; 11 Sam xv. 25, 2d.

The Elevated Railroad Man and the Cicas Man Work Alike.

New York ticket sellers for the elevated roads do their work with a celerity equaled only by the lightning change artist of a big circus. How do they manage it? Peep into one of the little ticket offices, and you will see that the methods of the man inside are identical with those of the circus man. There is only one way of selling tickets rapidly, whether at an "L" station or from the red wagon of a circus. When you hand in your money through the little opening, your coin or greenback goes to the ticket seller's left, and from that side comes the ticket, which he tears off from the long strip with his right hand. An Intelligent Dog

An Intelligent Dog.

A gentleman once had a very handsome and intelligent coilie in his possession. One day he lost the dog when taking it through the city. The creature in vain searched everywhere for his master and at last, seeing a hansom cab creeping leisurely along, jumped into it and settled himself determinedly on the seat. The driver tried to entice it out, but without success, and a little crowd collected. None darred to tackle the dog, but at last a facetious spectator shouted out, "I say, Bill, darn me if he don't want to be druy home." "That's it; that's what he wants," they all agreed amid shouts of laughter. Then one examined his collar and found an address clearly engraved upon it. Without further ado cabby jumped up and drove up to this same address, which proved to be the correct one. Needless to say, the cabman was substantially rewarded. The dog had been in the habit of driving home every evening with his master in a hansom and, with doggle rensoning, had decided to follow his usual custom when he had given up hope of finding his master.—London Opinion.

"I'd like to wring Dean's neck," was the hero's savage remark. "I wouldn't mind it so much if he owed me only my back salary, but to get me to lend him that $200 I'd saved for our marriage and then run away with it!" He put his head in his hands and looked the very picture of theatrical despair.

"Don't worry, dear," said the girl.

"Perhaps we may think of some scheme which will help us all out of the trouble. I may be thinking of one mow for all you know." This was said timidly and with an appealing glance at the hero.

"I'm almost afraid to tell you," the soubrette went on rapidly. "And, anyway, it isn't my scheme altogether. I hope that you won't think I am unwomanly to think of it, but what do we care for these Riggsville people? They never would see us again, and it probably would take us back to New York, and we could be so happy together."

"When you get ready to divulge this scheme of yours you will give me my cue to listen, won't you?" said the herosarcastically
"It's just this, dear" The girl turned her head so that he could not see her face. "You heard them joking about the wedding and all that. Will you do it?"

"Do you mean that you will cheerfully abandon your claims and sacrifice."

They had walked half way through the park at a smart pace, and she now sank on a shaded bench. He seated himself beside her. They were entirely alones ave for an old man at one end of their seat immersed in a book. Their agitated conversation continued.

"Oh, it is too dreadful!" she shudderd, covering her face with her hands, as if to shut out some unbearable sight.

"Fearful!" he agreed, deeply moved and mopping the profuse perspiration from his brow.

"Horrible!" she added. "I cannot bear to think of it. The loss of hope, happiness, perhaps even life itself"—

"Hush!" he interrupted. "Let us strive to think of it no more or it may grow to prey upon our minds."

"Pardon me," said the old man on the end of the bench, his water over the content of the

Its lancome.

Is any one too poor to save? is an important problem which the readers of a London dally are at present attempting to solve. The question is not by any means a new one. It is one which has troubled past generations, just as, in all probability, it will affect the generations yet to come. We cannot say that this latest discussion of the subject is throwing much, if any, fresh light upon it.

A GOOD CITY GOVERNMENT.

Glancing over the names of the Aldermen-elect it is plain to be seen that the City Council of 1903 will be a business one. A good working majority of them are practical men who know what the city needs and how to supply them. There will be no "bribery" investigations, or tomfoolery of any kind, but, like Burdett's College, "business from the start." The Aldermen to be are not only capable, but honest, therefore the interests of the people will be carefully guarded and promoted therefore the interests of the people will be carefully guarded and promoted by the Council of '03.

Mayor Feeney, too, is a young man of superior executive ability. Elected by the largest majority ever cast for Mayor in Woburn, and, being the youngest Mayor in the State, it will be his pride to give us one of the best administrations we ever had. He has had sufficient experience in the Chair to enable him to thoroughly understand the working of the government machinery, is judicious, active, honest, and as deeply interested in the prosperity and progress of Woburn as anyone of its 15,000 inhabitants.

With a Council of the character above described, and Mr. Feeney for Mayor, no fears need be entertained the the statement of the chances and the winning candidate.

CITY OF WOBURN

Holiday Goods.

It is a few days too early to look for a general display of holiday gift goods in the stores of the city, although in a few instances windows and counters are lined with them. On account of the bad weather sales have been slow, but are expected to increase largely from to-morrow to Christmas eve.

As a general rule the dealers have stocked up considerably heavier than in former years, and have a greater variety of goods to select from, and if the weather proves favorable it is probable their sales will be satisfactory.

It was lonely enough in the dressing room now, for most of the performers who were quartered in that vicinity of the house were early on the bill, and no friendly lights shone from their rooms as he passed.

He had almost completed his tollet for the street when Brown came down from the stage, perspiration streaming from his face as the result of his exertions. Hetherington merely glanced round and promptly returned to the intricacles of a new tie. Suddenly his ear caught a sharp click, and he looked up in astonishment to see Brown lock.

"As long as we're to share this box stall for the next two weeks we might as well know each other's name. Mine is Hetherington. I'm new to this end of the business, but have some small reputation in the east as an actor. I'm doing a sketch with Miss Phyllis Lancaster. Now that I've introduced myself may I ask'"—

The monologist disregarded this invitation for a moment while he struggled with a pair of tight litting green trousers. Finally, having adjusted the suspenders, he turned coldly with; "I don't think there is much in a name. Mine is Brown—Phili Brown—I'm the stage in one while they're striking your set and getting ready for the acrobatic act to close with."

Hetherington carefully outlined his eyebrows with black crayon before he replied with a light laugh: "Brown seems rather funny for stage use when you can pick out a name to suit yourself. But it matches your makeup and is as good as any other to travel by. It seems to me that if you are going to follow me either I am beastly late or you are horribly early, and, by the way, I thought Glenroy followed our act."

"Glenroy was switched to Los Angeles, and they brought me down from the Chutes, Yes, I've been playing the Chute, Yes, I've been playing the Chute, Yes, I've been playing the Chute, Yes, pic, the past three weeks, yet—I think the manager remembers the time when my name was worth as much on an eastern programme as yours is now—but it wasn't Brown then."

By this time Hetherington was fully dressed, and with a careless remark that he trusted they'd get along well during the week he carefully stamped out the glowing end of his second eigarette and climbed the rickety stairs which led to the stage.

There was trouble with the setting for his turn, and in the excitement of straightening the matter out there was little time for conversation with his partner before the act opened. After taking their curtain call be went directly to his dressing room. He had promised to meet a party of friends at the Bohemian club, and Miss Lancaster, known in private life as Mrs. Hetherington, was going to the hotel alone. A brief kiss and a laughing promise to be home by morning had marked their parting in the wings. He had quite forgotten his curious room mate.

Hetherington stood ready now, hat and gloves in band. He was becoming impatient.

"Come, unlock that door."

Without replying Brown stripped off the gaudy shirt and placed it on the hook above the already discarded coat ind vest. Below the short sleeves of his undershirt rose superb bleeps, and there was something almost contempt turus in the glance be turned on the lighter and more clegant build of his companion.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR.

His Power as Well as the Area He Rules Is Limited.

Rules is Limited.

The lord mayor of London is not the all powerful official he is thought to be on the continent. He is not the mayor of all London, but only of the city of London, and the City is but a fraction of the whole. Greater London has, roughly, a population of 6,000,000, but in the 650 acres that comprise the City there is a resident population at night of only 38,000 and by day of little over 300,000. And even within this area the powers of the lord mayor and of the twenty-six aldermen and the two hun dred odd common councilors are by no eans autocratic Much of what used to lie within his Much of what used to lie within his and their province has been taken over by the London county council. In fact, the average Londoner never thinks of the lord mayor as an edict makin, law giving official. He stands altogetes law giving official. He stands altocated apart in the popular mind from quartions of rates and assessments, school-and police. Very few people could say what legislative functions, if any, he fulfills. They may have heard that he is the chief magistrate of the courts, but beyond that their knowledge of his precise duties does not stray. It is the social and decorative side of his position that impresses the public. The lord mayor is never without his badge and rarely without his robes and chains of office. He rides abroad in a magnificently gilded coach, with powdered coachmen and footmen in cocked hats and silk knee breeches, sending a gleum of gold through the dirty drab of London.

Monkey Policemen.

In Hindustan monkeys are made use fol, and they do police duty after a fashion and often really assist the police in quelling disturbances or suppressing riots. Sometimes these four handed policemen act as protectors to the weak and helpless, as this incident will show:

Sugar is doubtless a food. It is a food of great energy. But we must not abuse it, says the Revue Scientifique. Why? Because, according to M. G. Bunee, the physiologist, pure cane sugar s lacking in line and iron. Now, lime nd iron are necessary to the organism. It is better to take the sugar in the form of legumes and fruits rich in hydrocarbons. And what is honey weth? Very little also. It has the same inconveniences—It als is wanting in line and iron. It will be ved, however, that if we cons il the advantages which, according to the hydrelists, attach to various foods, we shall fit that it is almost impossible to get any nourishment at all if we want to adjust our diet to scientific teaching.—

Jackie—No, auntie; it was her slipper.—Boston Courier.

God, that it shall be even as it was told me," and so it came to pass (Acts XxVii, 25, 44), I do believe that all that is written in this blessed book which is not yet fulfilled shall be fulfilled as literally as were all the prophecies concing of our blessed Lord. Every purpose of God shall be fulfilled in Christ (dax xiv, 24; Jer. II, 20).

17. And when they had seen it they made known above here as it was told me," and so it came to pass (Acts XxVII, 25, 44). I do believe that all that is written in this blessed book which is not yet fulfilled as literally as were all the prophecies concing of our blessed Lord. Every purpose of God shall be fulfilled in Christ (dax Xiv, 24; Jer. II, 20).

17. And when they had seen it they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

things and pondered them in her heart.

Better to ponder than merely to wonder. It is not wonder, but faith, that brings the blessing. The word preached does not profit unless it is mixed with faith in them that hear it (ifeb. lv. 2). Mary, like Daniel, kept the matter in her heart (Dan. vii, 28). If the truth is laid up in the heart and prayerfully pondered, we shall receive the light in due time.

20. And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

You could not shut them up any more than you could stop a volcano. It was in them, and, like Jeremiah, they could not keep still about it Jer. xx. 9). They had caught the spirit of the angels and praise God they must, and their testimony was all about Jesus. If we, in our ordinary vocadently doing while watching their flocks, He will show us greater things flocks, He will show us greater things as we can bear them and as He sees we will make good use of them. They also remind us of many shepherds watching over the souls under their care in this night of the world's history and daily expecting a call from the skies to summon them to the marriage of Him who was once a Babe in Bethlehem. May He, the great Shepherd, work in us all those things that are pleasing in His sight and so hasten His kingdom (Heb. xiii, 21; II Pet. iii, 12; R. V. and margin).

INDIAN TRADING.

The Way to Bent the Red Man Down
In His Prices.
"Few white men know how to trade with an Indian," remarked a Denver man who has made a study of Indians for ten years past. "I once met an Indian with a magnificen; mourrain lion skin. He was willing to part with the ornationt, but his price was too high.

I had learned to trade with an Indian,
I bought the skin for $1.50.

"The secret of trading with the Indian is to appear indifferent. The most successful trader is the one who goes with a supply of the same article he is most desirous of buying. The Indian sees that the stranger has had experience, and negotiations are carried on upon a strictly business basis. An Indian refused $10 for a bow and arrow.
It was bought for $1 by a man who carried several bows and arrows in his hand. This willy individual leased the supply from a store in order to impress his copper colored friends, and he succeeded.

The Tranquil Mind.

No man has ever yet succeeded in painting an honest portrait of himself in an autobiography however seducously he may have set to work about it. In spite of his candid purpose heomits necessary touches and adds superfluous ones. At times he cannot help draping his thought, and the least shred of drapery disguises it. It is only the diarist who accomplishes the feat of self portraiture, and he, without any such end in view, does it unconsciously. A man cannot keep a daily record of his comings and goings and the little items that make up the sum of his life and not inadvertently give himself away at every turn. He lays bare his heart with a candor not possible to the self consciousness that in record of his comings and goings and the little items that make up the sum of his life and not inadvertently give himself away at every turn. He lays bare his heart with a candor not possible to the self consciousness that in evitably colors premeditated revelation. Unknowingly he wears his heart upon his pen for daws to peck at. While Mr. Samuel Pepps was filling those small octavo pages with his perplexing cipher he never once imagined that he was adding a photographic petrati of himself to the world's gallery of immortals. We are more intimately acquainted with Mr. Samuel Pepys, the inner man—his little meannesses and

The Circistian Name.

The term "c_ristian name" is used in England and America only. "Baptismal name" is used in other countries. The term seems to have been used first after the reformation, when Biblical names were used as a reaction against the use of the saints' names in the calendar. It is evident that all Biblical names are not Christian, but the reaction went so far as to consider everything in the Bible as Christian and everything not in the Bible as pagan or certainly non-Christian.

A Rough Criticism.

Lord Houghton's epigram on "Sordello," probably the most obscure of Browning's poems, though it has often gone the rounds, is worth recalling. Said Lord Houghton, then only Dicky Milnes. "There are but two lines in Scordello," is can understand.

"You ought not to beg," she said.
"No, ma'm." admitted the tramp.

CHRISTMAS SUNDAY.

In nearly all the Woburn city churches appropriate Christmas services were held and Sunday School exhibitions given, on Sunday, Dec. 21. The weather was unfavorable for such exercises, but, for all that, they were well such as a sunday of the sunday and as a sunday of the sunday and sunday sund attended, and, as usual, entertaining Lengthy programmes of sweet Christ-mas music were enjoyed at each of the houses of worship, notwithstanding the services, as a general thing, were held in the vestries, lorced to those quarters by a scarcity of fuel to heat the audiand rostrums, were imbued with the Spirit of Christmas—"peace on earth, good will towards men"—and a thought Spirit of Christmas—"peace on earungood will towards men"—and a thought of the waiting Christmas goose may have contributed a mite to the joyousness of the services, which were an appropriate and happy prelude to the festivities, merrymakings, and distribution of presents (tokens of love and friendship), on the succeeding day of days, "Merry Christmas."

MUSIC HALL

The Boston Music Hall continues to draw immense audiences at every performance and the system of giving daily matiness is particularly pleasing with the ladies who can combine a shopping tour in town with a visit to the theatre and enjoy an excellent performance. The Children's Theatre in the Japanese Garden is another feature of Music Hall which is gaining a firm hold upon the public and the entertainments given there are of a sort well calculated to entertain and amuse the little folks. The program is changed each afternoon and so varied is the entertainment that a child might visit the theatre regularly for six weeks and never see the same thing repeated.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, it is certain to he needed before the winter is over, and results are much more prompts and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system. In almost every instance a severe cold may be warded off by taking this remedy freely as soon as the first indication of the cold appears. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no harmful substance. It is pleasant to take—both adults and children like it. Bay it and you will get the best. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

English Deer Hunting.

The running of the deer begins in November, and it is said they often in November, and it is said they often at ake as keen an interest in the hunt as their pursuers. The hounds are never allowed to kill them, and the same ones are often run for several successive years. Twenty-dive of the heifers and does are selected for the season's sport, and two are usually run in a week. The one chosen for the day is a week. The one chosen for the day is the lar, with his head up, and takes a sweeping glance around before he is away like a shot. He is given five minutes' 'liaw,' while the well trained hounds and horses stand tremblingly impatient to be off in pursuit.

At the foot hay a gayly flustrated copy of Mother Goose's rhymes, which Nurse Powell had been reading afoud before kindly sleep came to the small sufferer. Now Jinny pointed to it with a wan smile.

"I've had the funniest dream! I went to Mother Goose's land, way, way off, an' she was such a funny ole woman, an' she was right glad to see me! An' she says, 'Little girl, would you.

says, 'Little girl, would you stay with me awhile?' An' I says, 'I'm obliged to you, ma'am, but I can't stay long.' An' then she brings out the purtiest dress, purtier than my red wrapper, an' she says, 'Little girl, would you like to wear that?' An' when I see the little stick all tied with ribbons I knew it were little Bopeep' dress, an' I put it on an' chased them sheep all roun' the field, an' it never hurt my back a bit. An' I tried on lot uv clothes, Little Miss Muffett's ruffled connet, an' Mary, Mary Quite Con-rary's big hat, an' the Queen of leart's long train, an' Mother Goose, he says, 'Ain't you havin' a good time, tile girl?"

I says: 'Yes, ma'am, thankee, "An' I says: 'Yes, ma'am, thankee, ma'am, but I guess I'd better be a-goin'. You see, my big doctor 'il be roun' pretty soon, an' he'll miss me if I ain't in my cot. An' Nurse Powell will bring my bread an' milk, an' there won't be any little girl there to eat it.' An' then Mother Goose she says, 'All right, little girl; jus' jump on my broomstick, an' we'll be down there in a jiffy.' An' here I am, an' I'm glad, fur the bed feels so cumfy, an', sure enough, my big doctor is here."

The great black eyes glowed wondrous bright as they met the big doctor's gaze, and he spoke very gently while he stroked her hand, now thin and transparent.
